WALL STREET STOCKS TURN LATE TRADE

Many Leading Issues Carried 5 to 25 Points Below Early Highs Before Buying Checks Decline.

ENGLISH BANK RATE RAISE IS FEARED

High Grade Industrials and Utilities Bought Early—Some Wide Ranges in Day's Trade.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—The stock market went into a bad nose dive in the last hour of trading today after an earlier outburst of strength had carried nearly a score of issues to record high levels. So heavy were the offerings of stock that many of the leading issues were carried down 5 to 25 points below their early highs before sufficient buying support could be supplied to stem the heavy stream of selling.

While many observers accepted the decline as further proof of the market's weakened technical condition, traders who sought reasons for the selling attributed it to the prospect of a rise in the bank rate. A higher Bank of England discount rate on Thursday, to counter a decline in steel output to a level below that of the corresponding period last year and the statement of Alexander Legge that International Harvester's common stock, of which he is a large holder and which company he formerly headed, was selling too high.

English Gold Moving Out.
With the Bank of England losing another $250,000 gold today on top of yesterday's loss of more than $1,500,000 bringing the total losses for the two days to approximately $1,750,000, the possibility of a rise in the bank rate this week was again a topic of considerable discussion. Some weeks ago it was stated that action depended largely on the maintenance of the further loss of gold in the intervention exchange. In the interval sterling was depressed but until now the bank managed to retail its gold position. The discount rates at London showed a stiffening tendency, with gilt-edged securities heavy in tone.

The day's news developments included the publication of a series of unusually favorable August railroad earnings statements, reports of a drop in crude oil production last week, the offering of new North American Co. stock at $100 a share and the announcement of merger terms between Electric Bond and Share and Electric Industries.

Time Money Firm.
"Bear" traders sold stock heavily and apparently succeeded in pushing off a large number of "cheap" issues, which had been held by timid investors and traders who were nervous as a result of the steady liquidation of some of the leading stocks in the past week.

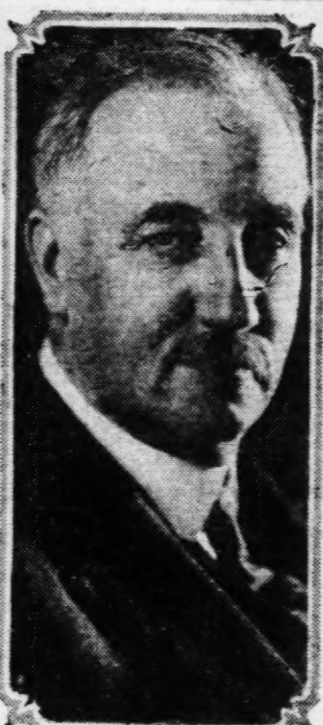

Call money held steady at 8 percent all day. Time money rates were somewhat firmer, being quoted at 9 to 9 1/4 percent, instead of at a flat 9 percent basis. Wall Street believed that the peak of fall commercial demands will be reached in the next fortnight.

High priced issues melted rather rapidly, indicating the absence of any nearby bids and the withdrawal of pool support. J. I. Case dropped 39 points, Commercial Solvents 22, Detroit Edison 21 and American Machine and Foundry 14.

U. S. Steel common dropped to an early high of 24 1/4 percent and rallied to 23 1/4, off 5 1/4 points. American Steel common dropped from 19 1/4 to 18 1/4, off 1 point. American Water Works, Consolidated Gas, Sears Roebuck, General Electric, Johns Manville, International Electric, American Can, Westinghouse Electric, Montgomery Ward and American International were among the long list of issues to show 4 to 8 points lower.

With the exception of the Canadian dollar, which sold at a discount of more than 1 cent, the leading level in a couple of years, leading foreign exchange rates showed a firm undertone. Stereotype cables were quoted at 1 1/2 percent in the belief that the Bank of England rate would be advanced next week in view of the further outflow of gold for shipment.

COLORADO TO FIGHT TO RETAIN $500,000 BANK GOT IN SWINDLE

By the Associated Press.
DENVER, Colo., Sept. 24.—The State of Colorado will fight any attempt by six New York banks to recover $500,000 worth of securities obtained by the Bank of Telluride, Colo., through the manipulations of C. D. Waggoner, bank president. This announcement was made today by Robert E. Winburn, Attorney General, on his return from New York.

HUGE SEA ELEPHANT BOUGHT FOR ZOO DIES ON TRAIN

Animal Was Being Shipped to St. Louis From Germany; Was to Cost $6500.
A huge male sea elephant being brought to the Forest Park zoo to replace Mopie, which died there a number of weeks ago, died on a Pennsylvania Railroad train between New York and Altoona, Pa., early today. Director Vierheller of the zoo was notified by telegram. The animal, a native of the Antarctic, of a species hard to obtain, weighed 3750 pounds and the zoo was to have paid Hagenbeck's $6500 for him delivered here.

The new elephant was being accompanied from Hamburg, Germany, by John Steinhoff, who brought Mopie and his mate, Frya, here. Frya is still here. Authorities have not decided whether to attempt to purchase another companion for her this winter.

About five years ago an $8000 rhinoceros being brought to the zoo died at Hoboken, N. J.

COUNTY JUSTICE OF PEACE FREED ON LIQUOR CHARGE

Witness Not Sure of Contents of Bottles He Saw in Brentwood Magistrate's Automobile.
An indictment charging Joseph Tegethoff, Brentwood Justice of the Peace, with transportation of intoxicating liquor was dismissed by Prosecuting Attorney Castien today. The prosecutor said the only witness against Tegethoff, Charles F. Schmitz, was unable to say whether or not the bottles he saw in Tegethoff's automobile contained liquor.

The indictment was returned July 28, 1922, based on Schmitz's testimony before the grand jury that Tegethoff had liquor in his automobile on the previous April 3, election day in Brentwood.

Tegethoff was indicted jointly with William McManus, who has since died. All three were members of the Brentwood Board of Trustees, which was then divided by political dissension.

MRS. M'PHERSON TOOK BEAUTY TREATMENTS AT CHURCH COST

By the Associated Press.
DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 24.—"Alma's expense account" which included items for beauty treatments during Mrs. McPherson's evangelistic campaign here last July was too much for the congregation of Detroit's Four Square Gospel Lighthouse. Dr. Dawson MacCullough, acting pastor of the Detroit temple, said last night.

"I am afraid some of the members did not like the size of Mrs. McPherson's expense account," Dr. MacCullough said. "The items for the beauty treatment were not popular."

The congregation voted Sunday to sever connections with Mrs. McPherson's Angelus Temple and to repudiate a note for $2756 for part payment for the rental of the auditorium used in the evangelist's revival. The note was signed by the Rev. George Fink, a former pastor of the church, who, church members say, failed to notify the congregation of its existence.

St. Louisian, Taken Ill at Summer Home in Massachusetts, Succumbs in Boston Hospital.

CREMATION THERE WITH BURIAL HERE

Designer of Some of Most Impressive Buildings in City Victim of Diabetes at the Age of 59.

Tom P. Barnett, widely known St. Louis architect and artist, died last night in a hospital in Boston. He was 59 years old.

Mr. Barnett had been in ill health, suffering with diabetes, for about a year. Two weeks ago he went to his summer home at Rockport, Mass., with Mrs. Barnett, for a rest, and became seriously ill a few days ago.

Mr. Barnett, president of the Tom P. Barnett Co. in the Arcade Building, lived at 3322 Lindell boulevard. Besides his widow, Mrs. Mary Mitchell Barnett, he is survived by two sons and two daughters, by a former marriage, who live in Chicago.

Active in the Artists' Guild.
As a creative architect, Mr. Barnett achieved a considerable reputation, having designed some of the most impressive structures in St. Louis. As a painter in oil, he has taken prizes in numerous contests here and elsewhere. He was a staunch supporter of the St. Louis Artists' Guild and one of the Guild's oldest members.

A telegram from Mrs. Barnett today announced that her husband's body would be cremated Thursday morning at Mount Auburn cemetery, Cambridge, Mass., in accordance with one of his last requests, and the ashes brought to St. Louis, his native city, for burial. Mrs. Barnett will return to St. Louis Friday.

TWO ASSOCIATES HELD IN KILLING OF GOLFING GANGSTER

Sebastian Conley, Alton Cigar Stand Owner, and 'Whitey' Bates Charged With Murder.

GRAY SEDAN OF FORMER MISSING

He Called for Jack Wilson in Auto After Leaving Him at Country Club on Day of Slaying.

Investigation of the case of Jack Wilson, alias Redfield, the "golfing gangster," who was found shot to death Saturday evening near Chouteau Slough, four miles north-west of Granite City, took a sudden turn last night when two of his associates were arrested and charged with murder.

One of those arrested was Wilson's partner in golf games at the Rock Springs Country Club, Sebastian Conley, known as "Bass," proprietor of the Metropole cigar stand in Alton and under indictment for trafficking in narcotics. The other is "Whitey" Bates, one-eyed hanger-on at the cigar stand, and like Wilson, a recent arrival in Alton.

The prisoners made no statements. They will be questioned today.

Bates was taken in custody at Conley's place of business, 102 West Broadway. Later police reached Conley by telephone and announced that Wilson was "in your hands." When Conley went to the police station, he, too, was detained.

Went Riding With Conley.
Although State's Attorney Bohm, who swore out the murder warrants, declined to discuss the evidence, it was learned information had been received that Conley and Bates called for Wilson at a certain address in Alton between 5 and 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon and took him riding in Conley's gray Stutz sedan.

"I'll be right back," Wilson said, on leaving, but he did not return. A witness reported Conley and Wilson rode in front, with Bates in a back seat.

Wilson's body was found about 6 p. m. The sedan is missing.

This information conflicts with Conley's assertion that he last saw Wilson at noon Saturday afternoon, after playing eight holes of golf, quit to keep an engagement, the nature of which he did not disclose.

DIRECTED VERDICT ACQUITS MUELLER OF BRIBE-TAKING

Demurrer for Former St. Louis County Prosecuting Attorney Sustained by Judge Nolte.

INDICTMENT BASED ON WRONG STATUTE

Justice of Peace Fiedler of Maplewood Testified He Paid Defendant $200 to Dismiss Charge.

A directed verdict of acquittal, freeing Fred E. Mueller, former Prosecuting Attorney of St. Louis County, of a charge of accepting a bribe while in office, was returned by a jury in Circuit Court at Clayton this morning when Judge Nolte sustained defense demurrer to the State's case.

The charge had been brought under the wrong statute.

The chief witness for the prosecution, Adolph Fiedler, 440-pound freeman, a lawyer of 5839 Barton street, testified that he had paid Mueller $200 to dismiss a liquor possession charge against Edgar E. Horn, and that Mueller had kept informed of the proceedings of the grand jury which indicted Fiedler on four other charges, telling Fiedler the contents of his indictments before they had been returned in court.

"I knew everything the grand jury was doing," Fiedler boasted.

Under Wrong Statute.
The defense demurrer, argued by William Baer, of counsel for Mueller, was that Mueller was indicted under section 2178 of the Revised Statutes, which was enacted in 1835, making bribery of public officials a felony with seven years imprisonment as the maximum punishment, but that a later law, section 2192, enacted in 1855, took precedence over this. The latter statute makes any corrupt agreement with a Prosecuting Attorney a misdemeanor, punishable by three months in jail and a $500 fine.

If the prosecution were under section 2192, Baer went on, it could not be sustained, because the statute of limitations on a misdemeanor had expired before the indictment was voted. The State agreed with this. The Mueller indictment was signed by Assistant Attorney-General Ideultell Cunningham, who had been brought to Clayton because Mueller had been disqualified from working in Missouri, having announced his resignation as Prosecuting Attorney. Bryant argued in reply to Baer that it was discretionary which statute the indictment followed.

Hoover Urges Retention of Flexible Tariff Clause

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—A formal statement today made a plea for the retention in the pending tariff bill of the flexible provisions which a majority of the Democrats hope to repeal with support from some dozen or more independent Republicans of the Senate.

The President in this, his first statement on the tariff since the Hawley-Smoot bill was drafted by the House Ways and Means Committee, said he had no hesitation in saying that he regarded the flexible tariff "as of the utmost importance in justice to the public; as a protection for the sound progress in our economic system and for the future protection of our farmers and our industries and consumers."

Mr. Hoover asserted that the flexible provision was one of the most progressive steps taken in tariff making in the history of the country. He held it was wrong that there should be no remedy for isolated cases of injustice that might arise through the failure to protect certain industries, or to destroy the opportunity to revise duties which might prove higher than necessary to protect some industries and, therefore, become onerous upon the public.

Maintaining that the flexible provision as it is proposed to be amended places no despotic power in the hands of the chief executive, Mr. Hoover said the provision was supported by farm, labor, consumers and manufacturing organizations, and had never hitherto been made a political issue.

Despite the cumbersome in the methods of determining cost of production as set down in the 1922 tariff act, the President said the agricultural industry especially had received great benefits. He cited protection of the dairy industry as an instance.

"That industry would be a sad plight today," he said, "if it had not been for the increased duties given under the flexible tariff."

The President said it had been proved by half a century of experience that the tariff could not be reviewed by Congress more than once in seven or eight years, and that it would be only a destruction of the principle of the flexible tariff to provide that the Tariff Commission recommendations should be made to Congress for action instead of to the executive.

ITS HEADS LENT HIM $2000 ALSO ON HIS NOTES

H. L. Ferguson and F. P. Palen of Newport News Corporation Tell of Hiring Propagandist.

FURTIVE PAYMENTS AROUSE CRITICISM

Senate Committeemen Censure Disbursements to Him by Checks Made Out to "Oscar Olsen."

BY CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Under severe criticism today by the Senate committee investigating his navy propaganda at Geneva, Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., told of payments by his company to William H. Shearer amounting to a total of $18,900, for work at Geneva and Washington.

The payments were all made from the "merchant marine promotion fund" of the company and most, if not all, were made in cash, through checks drawn to the order of officials of the company.

The witness said there was nothing in the records to indicate direct payments to Shearer. His testimony led to severe comments from the committee on the furtive nature of the transactions.

Ferguson again denied that he knew anything about Shearer's employment by his own and two other shipbuilding companies to represent them at the Geneva naval arms limitation conference of 1927. He said that F. P. Palen vice president of the company, could tell the committee about the funds Shearer's employment by the Newport News Co.

Lent Shearer $2000.
In 1928, the year after the break up of the Geneva conference, Ferguson said he and Palen lent Shearer $2000 and took notes on the amount. Palen took two of Shearer's notes for $500 each and Ferguson took one note for $1000.

Shearer had represented himself as "broke, and badly in need of funds," Palen at that time had full confidence in Shearer's integrity. Ferguson said he approved checks for the payment of the loan to Shearer. A year after the Geneva conference in 1929, Ferguson said he and Palen "got a check" and sought employment with the company.

Chairman Shortridge produced several checks made out to "Oscar Olsen," dated as late as March, 1929, all charged against the merchant marine fund.

"What was being done with all this money?" inquired Shortridge. "It was paid to Shearer," said the witness. "In order to get rid of him and carry out an employment which he claimed he had with us." Other checks which also reached Shearer were made out to the order of Palen.

Live and Learn.
Ferguson said that he had approved the payment of all these checks. He said the employment of Shearer was "extensive and in distinct." Shearer claimed an employment at $1000 a month. Ferguson said he instructed Palen to pay him at the rate of $500 a month.

"Were other companies interested in these payments?" asked Shortridge. "No, we were the only one in this."

"We live and learn," commented the chairman. "We certainly do," said the witness.

The arrangement referred to was after the Geneva conference and Shearer got $6000 out of it. The witness said he did not know where it was entered into. Palen was the man who engineered it. Ferguson said that his company paid Shearer a total of $18,000, including the $6000 paid after the Geneva conference and all of it was charged to the merchant marine fund.

There were three arrangements with Shearer, one prior to the Geneva conference, one for the

THREE MEN ARRESTED ON BAD CHECK CHARGE

One Says Attorney Offered Him 40 Pct. of Proceeds for Getting Them Cashed.

Warrants charging the passing of fictitious payroll checks were issued today against three men who were arrested as part of a gang that has operated in St. Louis, Detroit, Mich., and Kansas City, Mo., for the last six months.

The men are William Koons, 60 years old, a lawyer of 5839 Barton street; Charles Holbeck, 37, a former avenue; and Earl Davis, both waiters.

Police Captain Kirk of the South Grand Station, who arrested Koons in his office in the Merchants-Laclede Building, and he had been identified by A. Ottensmeyer, proprietor of a soft-drink parlor at 2622 Cherokee avenue, as the man who had cashed worthless checks of the Christy-Walsh Fire Brick Co. for $22.50.

Holbeck, who confessed, according to Capt. Kirk, said Koons offered to furnish him checks, pay him 40 percent of each one cashed, and act as his lawyer if he were caught. On that occasion, Holbeck related, Koons printed a check which Davis cashed for $29 at a Sears-Roebuck store, 3700 South Grand boulevard.

Davis told Capt. Kirk he had heard of the check cashing plan from another waiter.

Police are looking for another man implicated by the men arrested.

FIRST BIG BRITISH ARMY CONTINGENT LEAVES RHINELAND

500 Soldiers Evacuate Wiesbaden While Germans Look On in Silence in Heavy Rain.

OCCUPATION LASTED NEARLY 11 YEARS

Police and Civil Officers of City Remain in Background as Regiment Departs for England.

By ALFRED M. MURRAY, Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

WIESBADEN, Germany, Sept. 24.—With drums beating and bugles blowing, but not with colors flying, the British army of occupation began its march out of the Rhineland yesterday after occupying it nearly eleven years.

The evacuation, although much has been written about it, had been limited daily to about half a dozen men and a few women and children whose departure has looked like that of ordinary tourists.

Officials have entertained the pleasant fiction that the army of occupation was just going to fade away, its departure as unnoticed as it is unregretted.

The Leicestershire regiment, with military pomp, hailed down the British flag at Koenigsberg Spa, 25 miles from here, today, and marched to the station where a special train was waiting to take them, their arms and baggage, back to England.

Rain fell in torrents but the whole population lined the streets to watch the departure of the regiment.

Officials have entertained the pleasant fiction that the army of occupation was just going to fade away, its departure as unnoticed as it is unregretted.

The regimental color guard, carrying the colors encased, preceded the main body of troops, 500 strong, headed by a Colonel, swinging the inevitable cane. Bugles blared the march of the FIFTH BRIGADE. The guard followed, bearing the Union Jack.

Crowds of townsfolk had gathered at the Koenigsberg station to watch the British soldiers depart; but they were kept back by the few Britishers left behind for detail work until the evening.

One German girl managed to wriggle through the lines. Good humoredly a tall corporal led her back to the barrier, saying with a smile:

"We are still in charge here, you know—for a few minutes longer."

Mass of Umbrellas.

Hotel terraces overlooking the station, as well as embankments, were black with people along the line of march of the departing troops—a mass of umbrellas in the pouring rain.

The German police had been kept indoors. One lone policeman represented local authority. Standing at a corner of the principal square he solemnly brought his hand to salute as the British regiment marched past.

The chief police inspector of the area ordered himself off duty for the occasion. He remained at home.

The silence at the station was impressive. Camera men and movie operators did their best to induce the people to demonstrate, but the "Auf Wiedersehen" which some tiny children, oblivious of the significance of the event, shouted from windows, could not alter the fact that the Rhineland said a mute farewell. "They did not shout loud enough," remarked one old German.

Two German Officials Present.

Two German officials were on the platform at the railway station. When a group of Koenigsberg municipal councillors arrived, there were quiet hand claps and whispered congratulations on the liberation of the territory.

If the Tommies left any German sweethearts behind, the latter must have stayed home, for no leave-taking was done at the train. The few remaining Britishers, however, cleared farewell as a German guard gave the signal and the train glided out, with soldiers at the windows singing "I'm Going Home," and cornets playing "Auld Lang Syne."

Koenigsberg was free. At Wiesbaden the troop train was boarded by a detachment of artillery, and the band of the Welsh Fusiliers played the regimental farewell.

Accused of Food Law Violation.

A warrant charging unlawful manufacture of ice cream, in violation of the State pure food and drug act, was issued yesterday against Jacob Aegerter, 1216 South Tenth street, by Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Pania. Aegerter is accused of manufacturing ice cream with less than 5 per cent butter fat as required by law.

Shearer Got $18,900 From One Firm

period of the conference and one after it.

Olsen was a New York employee of the company who paid over money to Shearer.

Ferguson said that the loan to Shearer, for which both he and Olsen were responsible to the company, was an "unwise" transaction. The loans were made not in connection with the Geneva conference, but because of Shearer's personal distress.

Senator Allen read from a letter from Shearer to Ferguson in which Shearer referred to an "amazing British secret document" which he claimed to have obtained and also to "an agreement between the you (Ferguson) and myself in the early stages of the 15-cruiser fight."

Ferguson's letter, also placed in the record, denied any such agreement.

Lays Responsibility on Olsen.

"How do you explain Shearer's continued employment," asked Allen, "after the Geneva conference, where his work excited such disgust among the shipbuilders and was so ineffective?"

Ferguson said that Olsen could explain, as he reiterated that he didn't know about Shearer's employment at Geneva till after it was all over.

"How do you explain that every major officer in the shipbuilding companies, as they have testified, was so uninterested in what was going on at Geneva?" asked Allen.

Ferguson said they were very much interested, and he assumed they read the newspaper reports.

Senator Robinson brought the examination back to the payments to Shearer for work after the Geneva conference. He quoted figures on a check which seemed to him to indicate that Shearer was paid of "15 and 10 bills and dimes." He wondered why the transaction had taken that peculiar form. The witness was unable to explain. He said that checks were made out to Olsen and Robinson because the payments to Shearer were in cash.

He could not tell why that was done. He did not know of any company record showing payments to Shearer.

"What was wrong about this Shearer business anyway?" asked Allen. "You seem to have been ashamed of it, from the clandestine fashion in which you drew the money."

Ferguson did not answer, but he reminded that he wished he had gone to the Geneva conference himself, as at one time he had thought of doing.

Allen's Denials With Shearer.

Allen, vice president of the company, followed Ferguson in the witness chair.

He said he was naturally interested in the Geneva conference, as a citizen and a business man. He was especially interested in what the conference would do about the American cruiser building program.

Like other witnesses, he had "a definite interest in the trend of the conference," and he wanted to know about any proposal that would affect cruiser building.

His company, he said, was incurring heavy expenses, probably $25,000 a day, on designs and materials for cruisers and any advice that the program might have to be altered would be of vital concern to his company.

Any agreement that would fix a definite naval building policy by the United States, he said, would be of great advantage to the shipbuilding industry.

He first met Shearer, he said, in October, 1926. An agreement was made by which Shearer was paid $7500 by three companies. It was not in writing. This was done in the office of Henry C. Hunter in New York.

His first conversation with Shearer had to do with a speaking tour that Shearer was planning to make, in the interest of building up the merchant marine.

The arrangement with Shearer contemplated speaking by him and general publicity work. Shearer had also planned to take newspaper advertising space, and he wanted Allen's company to help foot the bill.

First Hired for $7500.

The witness suggested that he see Clinton I. Burdo of the New York Shipbuilding Co. and S. W. Wakeman of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. The upshot was that the three companies invited in H. C. Hunter and asked him to act as a disbursing officer of the $7500 they had agreed to pay Shearer.

Shearer had already agreed on the amount in a conference with Allen and Wakeman.

Allen said that he had been greatly impressed by Shearer's "force and ability" and thought he would be a good man to promote the merchant marine cause.

Allen said the engagement of Shearer on the merchant marine publicity was to run about five months. No inquiries, he said, were set under way to find out his antecedents. Shearer professed to have a close acquaintance with the unemployed navy.

In 1927, Shearer suggested that he be employed to attend the Geneva conference, the witness said.

Allen was favorable to the idea. Indeed, he told the committee, he had more to do with the employment of Shearer on that mission than anybody else.

To Geneva for $25,000.

A conference was held March 17, 1927, in which the representatives of the other companies involved were present and Shearer was employed for a fee of $25,000. The meeting was in Hunter's office. The shipbuilders conferred together and then met with Shearer.

Shearer was to go to Geneva and "keep us advised on the trend of the conference."

The $25,000 was to cover all his expenses.

"Nothing more definite than that," asked Shortridge. "No nothing more definite," was the reply.

Allen said he understood that Shearer was to "report on the proposals before the conference and then," he said, "to take on the program, so that there was no necessity for reports by Shearer at all. He said he had never heard Shearer's 12 reports. They were kept around his office for a while, but he never had the time to bother with them."

"Indivisible to Talk Too Much."

Resuming his testimony at the afternoon session of the committee, Allen was asked to tell more about the agreement under which Shearer was sent to the Geneva conference. He said that in dealing with Shearer, he acted for the board of directors anything about the agreement.

"I considered it advisable not to talk about it too much," said Allen.

Nor did he tell the president of the company. He handled the matter he said, in the ordinary course of business and he had full authority to act. One reason why he did not discuss the agreement was that it involved not only his own company, but two others.

Shearer was given a check for $2500, which he identified as the amount he paid to Shearer for his work in 1926. The check was drawn to H. C. Hunter and represented one-third of the $7500 paid Shearer.

Shearer did not answer, but he reminded that he wished he had gone to the Geneva conference himself, as at one time he had thought of doing.

Allen's Denials With Shearer.

Allen, vice president of the company, followed Ferguson in the witness chair.

He said he was naturally interested in the Geneva conference, as a citizen and a business man. He was especially interested in what the conference would do about the American cruiser building program.

Like other witnesses, he had "a definite interest in the trend of the conference," and he wanted to know about any proposal that would affect cruiser building.

His company, he said, was incurring heavy expenses, probably $25,000 a day, on designs and materials for cruisers and any advice that the program might have to be altered would be of vital concern to his company.

Any agreement that would fix a definite naval building policy by the United States, he said, would be of great advantage to the shipbuilding industry.

He first met Shearer, he said, in October, 1926. An agreement was made by which Shearer was paid $7500 by three companies. It was not in writing. This was done in the office of Henry C. Hunter in New York.

His first conversation with Shearer had to do with a speaking tour that Shearer was planning to make, in the interest of building up the merchant marine.

The arrangement with Shearer contemplated speaking by him and general publicity work. Shearer had also planned to take newspaper advertising space, and he wanted Allen's company to help foot the bill.

First Hired for $7500.

The witness suggested that he see Clinton I. Burdo of the New York Shipbuilding Co. and S. W. Wakeman of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. The upshot was that the three companies invited in H. C. Hunter and asked him to act as a disbursing officer of the $7500 they had agreed to pay Shearer.

Shearer had already agreed on the amount in a conference with Allen and Wakeman.

Allen said that he had been greatly impressed by Shearer's "force and ability" and thought he would be a good man to promote the merchant marine cause.

Allen said the engagement of Shearer on the merchant marine publicity was to run about five months. No inquiries, he said, were set under way to find out his antecedents. Shearer professed to have a close acquaintance with the unemployed navy.

In 1927, Shearer suggested that money back," asserted Shortridge. "Yes I did and I still do," retorted the witness.

Less than a month later, Shearer appealed for money again, and the result was a $1000 loan. Shearer against gave a demand note, and the note this time was made payable to Homer L. Ferguson, the president of the company.

The witness, the committee and Shearer all laughed heartily at the testimony about the successive loans.

"Hope springs eternal in the human breast," quoted Shortridge, referring to Allen's professed optimism about the loans.

"He didn't suggest to you that he had information that it would be distasteful to you to have disclosed?" asked Shortridge. "He did not," was the reply.

In December, 1928, the witness said, Shearer received from the company $1000 a part of the $6000 that he got altogether during this phase of his employment.

"Practically a Gift."

"You call it a gift?" asked Shortridge. "It was practically so," said the witness.

He felt, the witness said, that Shearer was probably entitled to some more money on account of his merchant marine work. Shearer wanted $12,000 but Allen cut him down to $6000. Shearer at that time, he said, was thinking of entering the paint and oil business. The payment of $1000 like previous payments was in cash.

"I thought I had better not do that," he replied.

He conceded, in answering questions, that he paid Shearer in cash because he thought it better that the transactions should be "kept quiet."

In January, 1929, Shearer got another $500.

Why was he paid in nickels, dimes and five and ten dollar bills?" asked Robinson. "He wasn't paid that way," the witness denied.

Robinson said that notations on the check seemed to indicate the witness was paid in that curious manner.

Company Repaid Allen.

Further questioning developed that Allen had already been reimbursed for his loans to Shearer from the company's funds. Robinson lectured him sharply for his previous "humorous" replies about expecting to get the money back.

Again in January, 1929, Shearer received another $500 from the company. The consideration, said the witness, was the fact that he still was working for the merchant marine.

Shearer got another $500 on Feb. 26, and two days later $1000. The same consideration prompted the advances.

The total advances up from December, 1928, to February, 1929, were $3500, all in cash.

In March, 1929, a final payment was made. This was $2500 and it brought the total up to $6000 which was the amount of the loan.

Shortridge explained, was at the rate of $500 a month for a year's service.

Robinson asked: "What convinced you personally loan to a company?"

Allen said it was "the amount of the loan" that caused the change to be made.

"Do you consider that you owe the company the amount you lent to Mr. Shearer?" asked Robinson. "No," replied Allen.

MONEY O'K'D FOR COURTHOUSE SIDEWALKS AND GRASS

Ordinances appropriating $3000 for concrete sidewalks on all four sides of the new $4,500,000 Civil Court house are being carried out by the open space around the building were approved by the Board of Public Service today. They go to the Board of Aldermen now.

President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service expected to have the walks and sod installed soon. The building is expected to be ready for use in December.

Permanent steps of stone will not be provided for it, and an appropriation has not been made yet for temporary wooden steps for the two entrances.

NORTH AMERICAN CO. OFFERS COMMON STOCK

Utility Holding Concern Expects to Increase Capital $50,000,000 Thereby.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—The North American co., large public utility holding company, today offered common stockholders rights to purchase one new share of common stock at $100 for each 10 shares held.

On the basis of the current market of the stock about $170, the rights are worth about $6 a share. This is the first time North American has offered common stock for subscription since 1921.

F. L. Dames, president, in a letter to stockholders, explained: "The subsidiaries have undertaken programs for important extensions to their plants and systems, and due to the conditions which have for some time prevailed in the long-term bond market, it is deemed advisable for the parent company to furnish the greater part of the additional capital required in the near future. In view of the opportunity this presented for the profitable employment of additional capital, and of the strong position of your company, the Board of Directors feels that part of the capital required should now be raised by the issue of additional common stock."

He added that there was no intention of changing the policy of payment of dividends of 2 1/2 per cent in stock quarterly.

The new offering will yield additional capital of about $50,000,000. Warrants evidencing subscription rights will be mailed around Oct. 24, and may be used in full Nov. 15, or in four installments on that date, Jan. 2, April 1 and July 1, 1930. North American subsidiaries serve large areas in California, the vicinity of Milwaukee, St. Louis, Cleveland and the District of Columbia.

The Union Electric Co. is the St. Louis subsidiary of the North American Co.

Poison Container Beside Body; Letters in Pocket Addressed to Fred Bockhous.

The body of a man about 62 years old, with a small bottle and a glass beside him which had apparently contained poison, was found on a bench on Picnic Grounds No. 10 in the southwest section of Forest Park a little before noon today by a young woman walking in the park. Apparently the man had been dead for several hours.

At the morgue several letters addressed to Fred Bockhous were found in the man's pockets. One letter, dated August, 1927, and addressed to 4062 South Grand boulevard, spoke of "good chances in Los Angeles." Subsequent letters were addressed to Los Angeles and Springfield, Mo.

Besides the letters, the pockets contained 36 cents in cash. A Knights of Pythias button was in the coat lapel.

Wilson by his wife from the home of her sister, Mrs. Marie Kurts of St. Louis, Mo., to which Mrs. Wilson had gone from Alton. Informed by telephone today that Mrs. Kurts had been killed, Mrs. Wilson seemed surprised, but did not comment. She insisted, Mrs. Wilson was no longer at her home, and that she did not know her present address. She declined to discuss Wilson's activities or his claim that he was a stepson of a Philadelphia banker.

Among other papers seized in Wilson's room was a telegram to "Bass" Conley, reading: "Will see you in a few days. Everything OK. Joe Maguire." A dispatch from Detroit today stated a caretaker at a Detroit apartment where Wilson lived "remembers a Joe Maguire who was an associate of Wilson and who was reputed to be a run runner."

Asked to Move Twice.

Inquiry by the Post-Dispatch in Detroit revealed that Wilson had been asked to move from two addresses there this summer, the management terming him an undesirable tenant because of bootlegging and liquor running activities. He had many callers, apparently from the underworld, and always had plenty of money.

From midnight until morning he received many visitors, most of them foreigners. Authorities consider it probable he was running aliens into this country from Canada and that someone in the St. Louis metropolitan district was helping to distribute them.

State's Attorney Bohm came to St. Louis yesterday afternoon and for an hour questioned Miss Carrie Craig, 34-year-old Alton divorcee, because of her connection with a downtown department store as a shoplifter. A warrant charging her with stealing a coat has been issued.

Car Borrowed, She Says.

Miss Craig denied knowing Wilson. She said she drove to St. Louis in a car borrowed from a friend, George C. Harrison, who she asserted, was employed in a dice game operated by Conley. She said Harrison recently moved to Alton from Detroit. The car bore a Michigan license plate, but investigation showed the car was the property of the Riesmeyer Motor Co., of Webster Groves and had been reported stolen Aug. 22 from the Glen Echo Country Club.

Questioned further today, Miss Craig admitted she knew Wilson as "Jack Moore of Philadelphia."

Harrison, who came from Detroit with Wilson, is being sought by the St. Louis police for the murder of Harrison. He is reported to have said: "They killed him for no reason at all. I know who did it."

Coroner Mercer has set the inquest for 7:30 p. m. tomorrow.

MOTHER KESSES $20,000 SUIT OVER LOSING OF HER SON

East Side Jury Rejects Claim Against Woman Owner of Bar Where Shooting Occurred.

A jury in East St. Louis City Court today returned a verdict in favor of Mrs. Sam Yociss, defendant in a $20,000 damage suit filed by Mrs. + Josie Janner of 1517 Winstanley avenue, whose son, William Janner, was killed Jan. 23, 1926, in or near a saloon operated by Mr. and Mrs. Yociss at 537 Collinsville avenue.

Mrs. Janner sued under a clause in the Volstead act which holds properly owners responsible for the result not violations of the law on their property. It was charged that Herman A. Gerking, then an East St. Louis policeman, who shot and killed Janner, did so under the influence of liquor obtained at the Yociss bar.

Gerking was exonerated at the inquest. Mrs. Elsie Barnhouse, one of two witnesses whose testimony led to his exculpation, was murdered four months later. Gerking was convicted of the crime on circumstantial evidence, the State charging he killed her because she threatened to expose his connection with the Barker case. He was taken from the Chester penitentiary, where he is serving a 20-year sentence, to testify at the suit tried today.

GAMBLING CHARGE IN COUNTY DISMISSED

Witnesses Fail to Identify Basil Neel—Another Case Pending Against Him.

A charge of setting up and operating a gambling device against Basil Neel, a salesman of 7222 Natural Bridge road, made in an indictment returned by a special grand jury Aug. 20, 1928, was dismissed at Clayton today by Circuit Judge Neel for want of prosecution. A previous indictment against Neel, for the same offense, remains to be tried Oct. 21.

A jury had been selected today when witnesses named by the grand jury against Neel told Associate Prosecuting Attorney Neel and Neel was not the man they saw in the gambling establishment. Neel thereupon asked for a continuance to make an investigation, but this was denied by the court.

The State's witnesses in the case who could not identify Neel were Joseph Edler, Herman Weidinger and Francis Weidinger of Florissant and Deputy Sheriff Walter Maschmied.

Neel will be brought to trial to face a different set of witnesses on a gambling charge under an indictment returned by the same grand jury July 26 of last year.

JOHN COOLIDGE AND HIS BRIDE ON HONEYMOON

He and the Former Florence Trumbull Leave Plainville, Conn.,—They Pass Through Northampton, Mass.

MARRIED IN SIMPLE CHURCH CEREMONY

Crowds Wait to Greet Them—Former President Prominent Figure at Reception.

By the Associated Press.

PLAINVILLE, Conn., Sept. 24.—Mr. and Mrs. John Coolidge are honeymooning today, hoping for two weeks of privacy.

They rode away from the home of Gov. and Mrs. John Trumbull, the bride's parents, at 7:30 o'clock last night in a Connecticut official automobile driven by a state police chauffeur for an unannounced destination.

Speeding away from Plainville at an hour, ahead of show-ers of confetti, they were soon lost to the view of the crowds who gathered the "simple and quiet" wedding yesterday into the most conspicuous event in the history of the 100-year-old community.

As one at the Trumbull mansion would say whether the pair were expected here again before Oct. 7, when John Coolidge must resume work at his desk in a railroad office at New Haven.

This morning they visited the Coolidge home in Northampton, Mass., spent about an hour with the bridegroom's parents and then departed, in a northerly direction, in the bride's roadster.

Reception Following Wedding.
The reception at the Trumbull estate following the wedding was a scene of gaiety until the newlyweds departed.

As the new Mrs. Coolidge descended the stairs of the home, the long-trail ivory satin wedding gown, the bride wore a simple and quiet. The bride's gifts to her attendants were pictures of the bride and groom. John Coolidge gave his best man and ushers leather cases.

Everywhere were lines of blue-coated policemen, augmented by 50 State Troopers—half the Connecticut force—called out to direct traffic and insure the privacy of the wedding party against the crowds.

Newspaper and camera men, assembled in numbers for the wedding, were excluded from the church and only two reporters from Hartford newspapers were admitted to the reception. This was in keeping with the desire of the bride and groom to make the wedding "a quiet family affair."

Immediately after the reception festivities, former President and Mrs. Coolidge departed by automobile for their home in Northampton, Mass.

ST. LOUIS CLOSER TO DIRECT ROUTE EAST THAN CHICAGO

Chamber of Commerce Chart Corrects Impression Created by Eckner and the Zeppelin.

To counteract the impression fostered since the Graf Zeppelin passed up St. Louis, that St. Louis is off the shortest route from Los Angeles or El Paso to Lakehurst and New Jersey, the Chamber of Commerce issued a chart and statement today.

It was made clear that the Great Circle, or shortest route from Los Angeles by between St. Louis and Chicago, but 27 miles nearer St. Louis, and that the Great Circle course from El Paso lay 93 miles south of St. Louis and 263 miles south of Chicago. The chamber is contending for air mail to New York on a basis of directness and consequent speed.

When the attention of Dr. Georg Ahrens, German Consul, was called to the statement, he remarked that he had been the most disappointed of the Zeppelin, as known, encountered difficulties in the Southwest, and that Dr. Eckner probably referred to the remainder of the flight, and not the entire distance from Los Angeles when he said he picked out the shortest route.

The wife of the Governor had been asked to comment on a rumor that the parents of John gave a trust fund amounting to $50,000.

"Oh, no, I don't think that is so at least I haven't heard of it," she said. "Mr. Coolidge, the father, gave them a check. You can say it was a substantial one."

Many pieces of china were among the presents. There was also a blue and yellow Chinese rug, several Oriental rugs, six silver goblets, many vases, pieces of pewter and articles of antique table silver.

The bride's gifts to her attendants were pictures of the bride and groom. John Coolidge gave his best man and ushers leather cases.

TUNNEY DEMANDS $100,000 IN REPLY TO FOGARTY SUIT

Retired Boxing Champion Charges Fort Worth Man and Wife Tried to Blackmail Him.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

STAMFORD, Conn., Sept. 24.—Gene Tunney's answer to the $500,000 allegation of affection's suit brought against him last July by John S. Fogarty of Fort Worth, Tex., was filed in Superior Court yesterday by Cummings & Lockwood, his counsel. It consists of one paragraph of 13 words in which Tunney denies the charges made in Fogarty's complaint and makes a counter-claim of $100,000 against Fogarty in which Tunney charges the Texan and his wife conspired to blackmail him. The answer follows:

"And the defendant denies the truth of the matters contained in the plaintiff's complaint."

The counter-claim reads: "1. Between October 1924 and the date hereof the plaintiff and Katherine King Fogarty conspired, combined, confederated and agreed together and with divers other persons, to defraud the defendant by threats of injury to his reputation, and by defamation of his character, to blackmail him and to cause him to suffer mental anguish, public humiliation and notoriety; to present false, scurrilous and unfounded charges, and to publish or cause to be published said charges, and to compel him to expend money to protect his reputation, standing, home and property rights."

"2. In pursuance of said conspiracy and to effect the purpose thereof, the plaintiff and Katherine King Fogarty, between October 1923, and the date hereof, made false claims that the defendant agreed to marry said Katherine King Fogarty and said plaintiff and said Katherine King Fogarty threatened to publish and, in fact, did publish, and cause to be published, such scandalous and scurrilous charges against defendant, and employed lawyers to treat the defendant as a criminal at law or in equity against the defendant, based upon such charges."

"3. By reason of the premises the defendant has been injured and caused to lose valuable property rights and money, and has been subjected to the expenditure of large sums of money. The defendant claims $100,000 damages."

Tunney and his bride, the former Miss Polly Lauder of Greenwich, are still in Italy at their place on the Isle of Brioni. It is not known when they will return, although it is presumed Tunney will be in this country if the suits brought by Fogarty and his wife ever come to trial.

Fogarty's counsel, Frank J. Martin of New Haven, must file a reply to the answer and to the counter-claim before the case can go to trial.

900 STREET CAR MEN VOTE TO REFER PAY DISPUTE TO STATE

Approve Decision to Have Commission Rule on Wages of 35 Employees Instead of Striking.

Approximately 900 street car men attending union meetings yesterday at Unity Hall, Grand and Page boulevards, voted approval of the decision of their executive board to refer a wage dispute involving 35 union laborers and helpers of the Public Service Co. to the Public Service Commission, rather than call a strike.

The executive board, at a meeting Saturday night, decided to seek an interpretation of section 46 of the Public Service Commission award from the commission. The decision was made in the interest of harmony and general public welfare, officers of the union explained. Those of the 4600 members of the union attending yesterday's meetings approved the action without a dissenting vote.

The union contends that the 35 laborers are entitled to a wage increase of 4 cents an hour since May 20, last, under section 46 of the award. The company declined to pay the increase, asserting that the section did not apply to the men in question, and asked for an interpretation by the Public Service Commission.

SAYS POLICEMAN SOUGHT $100, FREED OF TRAFFIC CHARGE

A charge of failing to keep to the right side of a street against Victor Cleri, 28 years old, 3351 Meramec street, was dismissed by Police Judge Roseman today after Cleri accused Motorcycle Policeman Carrow, who had arrested him, of attempting to extort $100.

Cleri declared Carrow ordered him to the curb at Nineteenth and Olive streets Sept. 13 and found 11 quarts of gin in the car. After driving to a saloon at Compton and Laclede avenues in a vain attempt to borrow money, Cleri said, he accompanied Carrow to Laclede Avenue Police Station where his liquor was confiscated and he was booked for police court.

Carrow denied he solicited money from Cleri. A bribe was discussed, he said he observed Cleri throw a key away so he picked up the key and found that it fitted a compartment in which the gin was stored. The 11 bottles had been turned over to Federal authorities as evidence for a liquor law prosecution, Carrow said.

PEACOCK ON STAND
DESCRIBES ROWS
WITH YOUNG WIFE

Defendant in Murder Trial Says He Always Loved Her but They Couldn't Get Along.

By the Associated Press.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 24.—With a voice that trembled slightly, Earl F. Peacock, youthful radio repairman, testified today that he had "always loved his wife," the young woman that he admits he killed and whose body he burned.

Except for this one break, Peacock answered his attorney's questions calmly and steadily as he was placed on the stand in an effort to refute the State's assertion that he planned the killing of his wife of a year, Dorothy Peacock.

Peacock described his brief married life—a marriage that his wife had called a "fake." He told of their many quarrels and the culmination when he in his rage struck her over the head and then killed her with his hands.

A desire for parties and gaiety by his wife and his own wish for a quiet home life led her to seek companionship of other men, Peacock testified. After they had been married only 10 days, they quarreled because Dorothy "stayed out late," he said, and this led to his wife's moving away from their Mount Vernon apartment to a furnished room in New York.

A desire for parties and gaiety by his wife and his own wish for a quiet home life led her to seek companionship of other men, Peacock testified. After they had been married only 10 days, they quarreled because Dorothy "stayed out late," he said, and this led to his wife's moving away from their Mount Vernon apartment to a furnished room in New York.

"She said she had been out with her father. I didn't believe it and told her so but she said she was tired and wanted to be left alone."

The next day when he returned from work, said Peacock, his wife was gone and he found a brief note which told him of her intention not to return.

Peacock's mother, Catherine Peacock, mother of the defendant, was on the witness stand just before her son was called. She told briefly of her own childhood and of her early marriage. Earl's father, she said, was not always accountable for his actions and had a violent temper.

The son, she said, had shown indications at times of a similar uncontrollable temper.

Records also were introduced by the defense to show that a great aunt of the defendant had been an inmate of a hospital for mental diseases.

The examination of the defendant had not been completed when the noon recess was taken.

BOMB ATTACHED TO GEAR DAMAGES TRUCK ON STREET

Negro Burned, Leaps From Seat and Vehicle Collides With Another at 2822 Washington.

By the Associated Press.

A bomb, made from a piece of steel tubing and designed so as to discharge when gears of a truck to which it was attached were shifted, exploded, startling home-going motorists at 5 p. m. yesterday as Charles Reynolds, a Negro, 1822 A Biddle street, started his machine in front of 2822 Washington boulevard.

Reynolds, burned on the face and right arm, jumped from the truck, which caught fire and stopped after striking a parked automobile. The blaze was extinguished by firemen.

The truck was bought six weeks ago from an Italian whom Reynolds knew only as "John." Police think the bomb was placed in the mechanism while the truck was owned by the Italian, and that it failed to explode until yesterday.

MURDERER OF 'WITCH'
HANGS HIMSELF IN CELL

Michigan Man Awaiting Trial With Wife Ends Life in Kalamazoo Jail.

By the Associated Press.
KALAMAZOO, Mich., Sept. 24.—Eugene Burgess, 53 years old, who, with his wife, Pearl, was charged with the murder of Mrs. Etta L. Fairchild, 53, whom they believed to be a witch, hanged himself in his cell in the county jail at 4:30 a. m. today.

Burgess and his wife were scheduled to go to trial within the next two weeks.

The Burgessess invited Mrs. Fairchild to their house last summer, then beat her to death, throwing her body into a well. They confessed the killing, telling authorities they had feared the reputed power of the woman's "evil eye." Mrs. Fairchild, they said, was responsible for casting a spell over their daughter, Eugene.

MARINE SERGEANT BECOMES BARONET, QUITS U. S. SERVICE

Briton on Duty in China Inherits Title From Uncle and Gets Discharge.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, China, Sept. 24.—The enlisted men of the Fourth Regiment, United States Marine Corps, stationed in Shanghai, received a sensation recently when they discovered that one of their Sergeants was heir to one of the old titles of Great Britain.

Over night, Sergt. Fulque Agnew officially became Sir Fulque Agnew, baronet, and a few days after the news became public, the young man donned civilian clothes and left China to join his mother in Italy.

Agnew was born in 1890 at Washington, where his father, Maj. C. H. Agnew, formerly of the Seventh Hussars, was on duty at the British Embassy. At the age of 2 he was taken to England by his parents. He was educated at Harrow and during the World War was listed in the British Army, serving in both France and Egypt. In 1927 he joined the United States Marines.

Last year, Agnew's uncle, Sir Andrew Agnew, died in England, leaving him heir to the estates of Lochmaw, Scotland, but until just before the young man's discharge recently, there was no hint that a member of the Fourth Regiment was holding the title of a Baronetcy created in 1652.

FAREWELL AUCTION AT SALES ROOM
Small Crowd Attends Bidding
On Ornaments of 30 Years Ago.

A farewell auction is in progress at the R. U. Leonori Auction Co., 3501 Lucas avenue, for more than four decades known to hundreds of St. Louisans. Charles L. Leonori, who has been in the business for 30 years, says that the radio, automobile, telephone and time payments have sounded the knell of his business and he has decided to tear down the old building that houses the auction rooms and build a filling station and parking lot.

Ponderous furniture, paintings, pianos, pier glasses, all of the stately appointments of the casual crowd, dismissed as too large for the modern "efficiency" rooms. Paintings that once hung over huge fireplaces gather dust in odd corners, and the mantelpieces, too, stand cheerlessly alone.

The bric-a-brac and teakwood cabinets of the gay nineties are ranged with incongruous rakishness near the austere furnishings of crinolene days, awaiting the terse tones of the bidders. Some of the objects of art retain a touch of genius that enable them to outlive the passing years. A painting, "The Surprise," by Nuni, may some day hang in a gallery; a bit of marble statuary once caressed by an Italian sun may yet find a home into which it will blend.

Yesterday they were auctioning some of the paintings and photographs. Some of them were in ornate gilt frames; others were framed in heavy walnut; most of them reflected the taste of a day that ran to impressive landscapes, "life like" pictures of fish and fruit, and engraved like "sacs" of Darwin, Spencer and Huxley. They went for a small fraction of their cost.

There were those in the sparse crowd who indicated by their very presence that this is a gallery of memories, oldsters these, who sighed more than once as a portrait of a belle who smiles no longer in this world was offered in vain, unwanted and unclaimed. There are some 3500 articles in this store of memories, ranging from a four-poster bed to a doll of a little girl of the 18th age. All have their histories and in the faded rooms, so soon to be no more, lingers the charm of the St. Louis forever gone.

DIRECTED VERDICT ACQUITS MUELLER OF BRIBE TAKING

against Fiedler when he appeared before the grand jury, he admitted. These charged bribery, exacting illegal fees, disturbance of the peace and failure to exhibit his justice court docket. He was acquitted in two of these cases and the other two were dismissed.

Yesterday Mueller's counsel asked him if he had not seen Mueller on July 9, 1923, before going before the grand jury, and asked for the dismissal of all these cases. Fiedler admitted he might have done so.

Witness Cross-Examined.
"Did you say to Mueller, 'I see nothing left for me to do but go before the grand jury, and if I do I don't give a damn what happens to you?'"

Fiedler denied saying this and denied that Mueller said to him, "Tell the grand jury the truth about why I don't dismiss the indictments against you."

Fiedler also denied that Mueller had reminded him of events in connection with the charges against the Justice of the Peace and other past incidents. On the contrary, Fiedler asserted, Mueller said, "Wait till after the election and I'll see what I can do."

Another denial by Fiedler was that Mueller said to him: "You're nothing but a damned old bluffer! Get out of my office."

The State put Fiedler back on the stand this morning and he said he had been anxious to have his indictments dismissed. The State then showed a jury had acquitted Fiedler of failure to exhibit his docket before Mueller left Mueller's office and that since Harry W. Castlen succeeded Mueller as Prosecuting Attorney a jury had acquitted Fiedler of peace disturbance, while the other two charges were dismissed by Castlen after trials had begun.

Fiedler then testified that Mueller had called him into the prosecutor's office last year and told him of Fiedler's forthcoming indictment.

"If I don't indict you," Fiedler quoted Mueller as saying, "Fals threatens to have the Attorney-General here to investigate my office. Let these indictments go through and after the grand jury adjourns I'll hold press them."

The reference was to John D. Fels, a Commissioner of Maplewood, who was a member of the grand jury which indicted Fiedler. Says He Got Grand Jury Reports.

"Two weeks later," Fiedler continued, "Mueller had the short-hand reporter read the indictments to me before they were returned. That was the usual occurrence. I would come over in the evenings and have the testimony read to me that had been given during the day. I knew everything the grand jury was doing. Of course, I was interested in dismissing the indictments against me."

The first witness for the State was Charles Noble, First Assistant Prosecuting Attorney under Mueller and now Kingshighway Prosecuting Attorney under Castlen. Noble identified the information he had issued against Horn in the liquor case. Cross-examined, he said the information was based on an affidavit, but his memory was hazy as to the circumstances because he handled so many cases.

He also identified his entry in the Prosecuting Attorney's docket on July 6, 1927, in the Horn case: "Cause dismissed on recommendation of the raiding officer," who entry.

former Deputy Sheriff Charles Kick. Noble said the case had been dropped without his knowledge and he made the entry after learning about it by chance. He could not recall whether Kick had said he did not think the State could prove this case and added that the dismissal might have occurred several months before he made the entry.

COL. LINDBERGH TO START RETURN TRIP TOMORROW

Establish New Air Mail Line From Miami to South America.

By the Associated Press.
PARAMARIBO, Dutch Guiana, Sept. 24.—After establishing a new air mail line and bringing the United States and the Northeastern coast of South America 14 days closer, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh rested here today. His return flight, which will include courtesy calls to several South and Central American countries, will begin tomorrow.

He arrived in Paramaribo at 4:20 p. m. yesterday, completing a 2595-mile journey since he and his party, which includes Mrs. Lindbergh, took off from Miami, Fla., last Friday morning.

The new air mail extension has taken him from San Juan, Porto Rico, his former Southern terminus in the West Indies, over the Leeward and Windward group and down the South American coast for a total of 1920 miles.

On the return flight, Lindbergh plans to circle from Port of Spain over the Western Caribbean country before returning to Miami Oct. 10. Eight days will be spent resting at Cristobal, Canal Zone. The entire flight from Miami and return will be nearly 7000 miles.

Radio on Plane.
Accounts of the flight are being given by radio sending apparatus installed in the plane. Weather conditions, however, have made communication difficult for long distances.

Yesterday Lindbergh flew from Port of Spain, Trinidad, by way of Georgetown, British Guiana, where he made a scheduled air mail stop. Taking off early in the morning, he flew the amphibian plane across the narrow strait to the South American coast, skirting the Orinoco River delta and arriving in Georgetown about noon.

One of the most colorful receptions of the journey was accorded him during his hour's stay in Georgetown. Ships in the harbor were decorated and blasts from their whistles as the flyer who first spanned the Atlantic circled over the harbor could be heard for many miles.

Welcomed by Officials.
Government officials welcomed the party while the mail was unloaded and the plane refueled. Lindbergh supervised the handling of the mail and passengers, assuming the role of a regular commercial air pilot. At Georgetown the Colonel's plane was so lightened by unloading the mail that Juan T. Trippe, president of the Pan-American Airways Co., and Mrs. Trippe, who had made the journey in an accompanying plane from San Juan, came aboard.

Messages sent from the radio on the plane gave a graphic description of the scenery viewed in crossing the Orinoco jungle country. They said Lindbergh was interested particularly in the wild animals which went scurrying to cover when frightened by the motors.

Mrs. Lindbergh is keeping a diary of the long air trip.

WELL IN NORTHWEST YIELDS ICE ON HOTTEST DAYS
Theory Is That It Taps Part of Prehistoric Glacier, Buried Far Below Surface.

By the Associated Press.
SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 24.—Howard L. Peterson chips ice from his well here during the hottest summer day, and uses it to chill fruits and vegetables.

Peterson's father homesteaded the site in 1890, and used the well as a storage refrigerator for meat. It is known that this well had a part in the early history of the Pacific Northwest, for still further back there was a trading post of the Hudson Bay Co. here. During the struggle between fur companies, the agents stored pelts in the ice well to preserve them during the summer.

The theory has been advanced that a portion of the prehistoric ice glacier stayed here, buried miles deep in the ground, and that the well taps the top of it. Other theorists have said that the ice freezes in the well each year.

DORAN ORDERS IMMEDIATE LIQUOR CLEANUP IN CHICAGO
CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—E. C. Yellowley, Chicago prohibition administrator, returned from Washington yesterday with the information that James M. Doran, chief of prohibition enforcement, has ordered an immediate liquor cleanup here.

Yellowley announced he would call a conference of city, county and State authorities to make plans for a campaign. In Washington Yellowley conferred with Doran, George E. G. Johnson, U. S. District Attorney for this district, and Alexander Jamieson, chief of special agents assigned to this district.

Johnson said plans were made at the Washington conference that would result in "more effectively reaching the sources out of which come the income that goes into the treasury of gangland."

A. H. Chute, Novelist, Lost Life in Canadian Air Accident.

By the Associated Press.
MANILA, Sept. 24.—Private W. L. McKernan was killed in the crash of an army bombing plane at Nichols Field today after the controls had jammed at an altitude of 800 feet.

Lieut. Donald Phillips, pilot, and two others jumped free as the machine started to fall and landed safely with parachutes. McKernan also jumped but failed to clear the plane and was carried down with it. His nearest relative is Mrs. Mary McKernan of Rosslyn, Va.

By the Associated Press.
WINNIPEG, Manitoba, Sept. 24.—Three men were killed when a Western Canada Airways plane fell into Lake Manitoba, 120 miles north of Winnipeg, Sunday, an officer of the company reported yesterday. The dead, said the report, were George McKee, Toronto, pilot; Arthur Reach, Winnipeg, engineer; Arthur Hunt, Chute, New York, a novelist.

Chute was a native of Stillman Valley, Ill. He was 33 years old, and lived at the Authors' Club in New York.

An inquest will be held in the death of Miss Adele Bergfeld, 72 years old, 2542 Shenandoah avenue, who succumbed Sunday night of heart disease resulting from chloroform poisoning, according to Dr. Walter Eyerman, her physician. The report received by police did not give the circumstances under which the chloroform was administered.

SAM C. HILDRETH, VETERAN TRAINER OF HORSES, DIES

Director of Harry F. Sinclair's Rancocas Stable Succumbs in New York After Operation.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Sam C. Hildreth, trainer for Harry F. Sinclair's Rancocas Stable, died this morning in Fifth Avenue Hospital. He was 68 years old.

Mr. Hildreth had been ill for nearly a year but his condition did not become serious until last week. On Friday he was taken to the hospital from his home near Jobstown, N. J. Yesterday he underwent an abdominal operation and failed to rally.

Although in none too robust health for months, Hildreth would not take a rest from his duties as trainer until mid-August. Then he became so ill that he left Saratoga Springs for his home, Stromboli Farm, named after one of the greatest horses he ever trained.

He improved but suffered a relapse on Friday.

Mrs. Hildreth and the trainer's physician, Dr. Benj. T. Tilton, were at the bedside when he died.

Started as Broncho Rider.

"Uncle Sam," as the turf veteran was familiarly known about the track, was connected with conditioning race horses of one kind or another since his childhood days. First it was bronchos out West that attracted the riding skill of young Hildreth. Then he took up riding on the half-mile tracks of the Far West, developing into a successful jockey.

Following the natural trend, "Uncle Sam" became an owner and trainer with more than the ordinary amount of success. Before going with the Rancocas Stable he trained for the late August Belmont.

It was during the last decade that his greatest success came. With the money of Harry F. Sinclair he built up a stable that captured some of the greatest events of the American turf, year after year. But last season an epidemic among the Rancocas Stable's horses forced Hildreth down the list of leading money winners among trainers.

Zev probably was the best horse ever developed by Hildreth. This star of six years ago won $213,629 to become the leading money winning horse of the American turf. He also trained Mad Hatter, Frisillian, Stromboli, Bud Lerner, King James, Sublet, Nedana, Grey Lag, Uncle, Silver Fox, Kai Sang, Mad Play, Nassak, Ariel, Hourless and the famous McChesney, owned by E. E. Smathers, and the good mare Wilful. This year the stars of the stable are a pair of juveniles—Grattan and Mokattam.

Horses Always His Pets.

A year ago Hildreth's friends said he would never saddle another horse, but he returned at the start of the current season apparently as well as ever and started off with great success at the opening of the Metropolitan season.

The Rancocas Stable was dear to this veteran's heart. There was plenty of sentiment in his make-up, but no evidence of it was to be discerned from outward signs. Intimates knew, however, when he was angry; he invariably loosened his collar by inserting his index finger between the starched linen and his neck.

Some say that Hildreth boasted of having American Indian blood in his veins.

Hildreth was one of the few trainers of the old school who did not train the flesh off their charges. The thoroughbreds of the Rancocas Stable look high in flesh when they first go to the post and the more they race the better they appear. It was a rare occasion when a horse under "Uncle Sam's" tutelage broke down. Nor did he try to get the "last race" out of a thoroughbred.

Horses meant more to Hildreth than a means of accumulating money. They were his pets.

ARABS KILL JEWISH GUARD AT CHILDREN'S VILLAGE

Moslems Steal Cattle in Raid on Orphan Settlement in Esdrat-elon Valley.

By the Associated Press.
JERUSALEM, Sept. 24.—Arabs attacked the children's village in the Valley of Esdratelon last night while the children were asleep, killed a Jewish guard and stole cattle.

When the people of the neighboring Merhavia colony arrived the Arabs had fled. Police detachments from Nazareth are searching for the raiders.

The children's village was founded with the assistance of South African Jew. It gave orphans from the Ukraine a rural education.

LEAPS INTO RIVER; RESCUED

Despondent Motorman Sent to City Hospital for Observation.

Philip Brown, a motorman on the Tower Grove line, 3462 South Spring avenue, was rescued from the Mississippi River at the foot of East Filmore street at 9:30 a. m. today.

Brown was seen to leap into the river by Joseph Hartman, a workman at the Cottonwood Fiber Co., who jumped in and succeeded in dragging Brown to shore. Brown told his rescuer that he had been ill and was despondent. He was sent to City Hospital for observation.

POSTOFFICE THIEF TRACED THROUGH 4 STATES CAPTURED

John Shulse Arrested at Washington and Union
Confesses Strother (Mo.)
Robbery.

A trail of stolen postoffice money orders which led through four states ended last night with the arrest at Washington and Union boulevards of John Shulse, 43 years old, a painter, 5185 Delmar boulevard, who admitted robbing the Strother (Mo.) postoffice, Aug. 14, police and postoffice inspectors reported.

Although Shulse said he was alone, Mrs. Myrtle Clubb, a waitress, 603A Market street, told police when she was arrested that she waited outside in an automobile but denied that she knew that Shulse was robbing the postoffice. Both are held for Federal authorities.

Shulse had cashed 14 of 77 money orders stolen together with $30 in cash. Use of a dating stamp facilitated their passage, police said. Since the robbery, Shulse had traveled through Colorado, Kansas, Illinois and Missouri, obtaining funds with the stolen blanks as he went.

BANKRUPT'S REPUTED $5000 JEWELS SOUGHT

J. M. Krupin Denies Having Diamonds Witnesses Say
He Possessed.

Testimony in a hearing in which J. M. Krupin, bankrupt diamond merchant, was ordered by Referee Coles to show cause why he should not turn over certain diamonds to the trustee for the benefit of creditors was concluded yesterday with the whereabouts of the diamonds still undetermined. Referee Coles will decide whether Krupin must produce the jewels after both sides have filed briefs.

Max Kremer, trustee, had alleged that the bankrupt had failed to include in assets turned over to him a diamond ring valued at $500 and loose diamonds worth about $5000.

M. H. Smith, 32-year-old president of the Torchlight Loan Co. and other officers of that firm testified they saw the three-carat ring in Krupin's possession about 10 days before he went into bankruptcy April 30, 1928. At that time they said he also had about $5000 worth of loose diamonds in his store at 1212 Franklin avenue. Smith had taken the ring to secure a loan of $700, he said, and later exchanged it for other security.

Krupin testified that the ring belonged to his son-in-law and had been stolen from his daughter's home. He said he had no idea where it is now. He denied having $5000 in loose diamonds before the bankruptcy.

Krupin, according to testimony, now lives with his son-in-law at 2817 Goodfellow and is employed in his jewelry store at 4458 Easton avenue, whereas before bankruptcy the son-in-law lived with him and was employed by him.

In his bankruptcy petition Krupin listed debts in excess of $24,000 and assets of about $20,000. The case was heard last year but not closed. It was reopened on motion of J. M. Feigenbaum on behalf of the trustee, who declared additional information gathered since the first hearing made further testimony advisable.

Doorman Shot at Theater Dies.
By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24. — Charles Bell, doorman at a local theater, who was shot Sunday by an enraged patron, yesterday died of his wounds. Samuel Borcia, 40 years old, arrested when he fled from the theater, confessed, police said, that he shot Bell because the theater employee had not been able to find a seat for him.

THOROUGH CENSUS-TAKING AIDS POLICE OF ENGLAND

Even the Tramps on the Streets
Are Listed: Huge Maps Prepared in Advance.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—A possible explanation of the celerity with which British police find their quarry may be found in the thoroughness with which England keeps track of its inhabitants.

Huge maps now are being prepared for the taking of the next England-Wales census in 1931—maps showing every street and lane and court and blind alley in the land. Every nook or cranny in which an inhabitant might be overlooked on census day is included.

Tramps and gypsies who seldom sleep twice in the same place are not forgotten. They will be intercepted by policemen on census night and noted.

"Remember . . .
it must be Palmolive Soap if you want to keep skin youthful"

says Madame Elin Dahlstrand, sole representative in Stockholm of the Academie Scientifique de Beauté of Paris

IN the city of Stockholm, Madame Elin Dahlstrand superintends a beauty salon known not only in Scandinavia but also in Paris and other Metropolitan capitals. Here, Madame Dahlstrand carries out the beauty theories she learned at the Academie Scientifique de Beauté, in Paris, under Monsieur Georges Gay. And here she advises all her patrons to use two daily treatments including Palmolive Soap.

"It is a perfect cleansing preparation, even for a very delicate complexion," Madame Dahlstrand says.

"The pure palm and olive oils, of which the Palmolive Soap is composed, do not only cleanse the skin, but are also nutritious, and I have found that if one lathers the soap and lightly massages the skin with the lather, this revives and strengthens the tissue. Such a gentle massage with lather of Palmolive Soap should, in order to keep the skin clean and maintain its youthful bloom, be repeated morning and night.

"Time can do nothing to a skin safeguarded in this manner, and age cannot make its traces in the face. But remember that it must be Palmolive Soap if you want to attain these results; it cannot be done with any kind."

Other specialists of Scandinavia agree

And the great specialists of the North Countries agree with Madame Dahlstrand; among them, Madame B. Schanning of Copenhagen and Annie Skau, of Oslo . . . all of whom advise this treatment:

Make lather of Palmolive Soap and massage face and neck with this lather by means of small, gentle circulating movements for a few minutes. Then carefully rinse away all lather and dry thoroughly with a towel. And now—not before—you're ready for make-up.

North or South, in windy or mild climates—Palmolive apparently is made for every complexion. Is it helping to keep yours lovely? If not, you'd better buy a bar today. Because it costs so little, the millions who buy it use it for the bath, too. Try it—for face and bath—tonight, on the advice of the world's leading beauty specialists.

An assistant giving a facial treatment in the salon of Madame Elin Dahlstrand. "I have found," says Madame Dahlstrand, "that if one lightly massages the skin with Palmolive Soap lather it revives and strengthens the tissue."

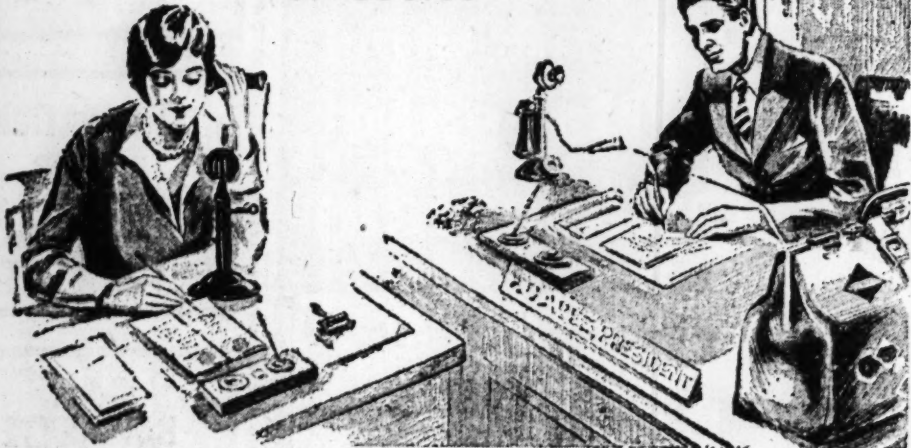

Madame Elin Dahlstrand, of Stockholm, likes to use her own judgment and taste as to cosmetics. She often mixes her own products. But she finds no need to prepare her own soaps. "Since I learned to know Palmolive Soap" (the translation preserves her Swedish style of conversation) "I have found it a perfect cleansing preparation even for a very delicate complexion," she says. "It is my valuable assistant in the service of beauty."

Elin Dahlstrand
STOCKHOLM

And—in America—a total of 17,311 Beauty Specialists also advise Palmolive Soap . . . The most tremendous professional endorsement any product ever had!

OFFICIAL OBSERVER

DANNY MILLER.
—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

BOY SCOUT TO REPORT IN BALLOON RACE

Lakewood, N. J., Youth Here as Official Observer for Dirigible Troop.

One of the busiest youths at the start of the Gordon Bennett balloon races here next Saturday will be 15-year-old Danny Miller, Eagle Scout, who arrived yesterday to act as official observer for Dirigible Troop 133 of Lakewood, N. J., the first scout troop in the world to take up the study of aviation exclusively.

The Dirigible Troop was started last March by the Shenandoah Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, to which several survivors of the navy's ill-fated dirigible Shenandoah belong. Danny is responsible for a graphic report containing all the necessary scientific data on the take-off of the race. In addition to making this report which he is to read to the 40 members of his troop and to several elvic organizations when he returns to Lakewood, he will also act as personal aid to Lieutenants Settle and Bushnell, who will pilot the navy's entry in the race.

Danny's interest in aviation dates back to his early youth, for Lakehurst, the navy's lighter-than-air headquarters, is only nine miles from Lakewood. Long before the Dirigible Troop was ever thought of, Danny knew as much about lighter-than-air craft as some boys who were stationed at the field to service and care for the ships, because he spent most of his spare time there observing the movements of ships and flying officers with questions.

The Dirigible Troop meets at Lakehurst once each month and the scouts are instructed in a ground course by some of the Navy's experts in lighter-than-air craft. Some practical instruction is given far above the field in a captive balloon. Danny was chosen to attend the races here because he was able to grasp the theories of flight quicker than his comrades.

Danny seems to know all the important naval flyers and he often quotes them to prove his conviction that the dirigible's future
as a commercial carrier is assured.
He was on hand with the rest of his troop to assist in any way possible each time the Graf Zeppelin landed and took off from Lakehurst, and he is fairly overcome with enthusiasm when he tells of his trip through the big ship with one of the crew.

Needless to say, his ambition is to become a dirigible commander, but he frankly admits he is too impatient to join the Navy and go through all the tedious steps that are necessary in the service.

TWO OFFICERS SHOT BY TWO OTHERS BY MISTAKE ON CALL

Four Men Summoned to Chicago Suburban Home Didn't Recognize One Another.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—Four suburban policemen, answering an alarm in North Riverside, met at dawn today and, failing to recognize each other, exchanged volleys of shots.

Arthur Belts, Chief of Police of North Riverside, and Sgt. Fred Molkentine of Riverside were seriously wounded. Firing as they crawled, the wounded pair made their way into the house from which the alarm had come and peered from a window to see their assailants.

"Who're you?" Belts called.
"Jisa and Cada," came the answer. The chief recognized them as Joseph Jisa, village trustee and volunteer policeman, and Stanley
Cada, policeman.
John Pederson, hearing a woman scream for help in the rear of his home, first called Belts and then, remembering Jisa and Cada lived nearby, summoned them.
Belts and Molkentine arrived first, found nothing suspicious, but as they started to leave, met shotgun fire from the other pair. The two officers suffered heavy charges of bullets in the faces, shoulders and backs.

SUFFERED CONSTANT TORTURE

"Finally my doctor suggested that I try a pair of Ground Gripper shoes. Now my foot troubles are over. Fallen arches were the cause of my misery."

How foolish it is to permit poorly designed shoes to cripple our feet and limit our activities!

Foot troubles are so needless; shoes combining the three correct principles eliminate them.

Ground Gripper shoes bring comfort to tender, aching feet... quickly and unfailingly. For they relieve all pressure and strain and allow the foot muscles to function with natural freedom.

Ground Gripper shoes are a real godsend to those who suffer from aching feet. Be sure to try them.

BRITAIN TO RATIFY PACT REGULATING TRAFFIC IN ARMS

Lord Cecil Tells League
This Action Probably Will Depend on Other Nations' Acceptance.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 24.—The British Government is ready to ratify the international convention for the regulation of traffic in arms, Lord Robert Cecil announced today to the Assembly of the League of Nations.

Ratification, he added, probably would be accompanied by a condition that Great Britain's adherence to the agreement would become effective only when other arms-manufacturing countries subscribed to the same treaty.

Pressing of the Labor Government's program for expediting the convening of a general disarmament conference, Lord Cecil again emphasized his conviction that limitation of land materials for war was the issue of the problem.

"Unless you limit land materials, you accomplish nothing for the cause of disarmament," he said.

The Assembly's session centered on measures for the abolition of war and the British delegation took occasion to commend the three measures to this end presented by the Disarmament Committee. One concerned the progress of the Preparatory Disarmament Commission's work toward a general conference, the second embodied proposals for giving financial aid to nations, victims of aggression, and the third related to securing the adoption of a model treaty to prevent war.

Referring to his own disarmament resolution which has caused a fervid debate in the committee

because it brought up again the question of trained reserves, Lord Cecil said his sole purpose had been to expedite the movement toward general disarmament. Those who said he had wished to delay disarmament or to injure "certain military powers" were talking "hysterical nonsense."

Eduardo Cobián, Spanish delegate, presented a report on the financial assistance scheme. The final committee draft included the conflicting French and British views regarding procedure on the outbreak of hostilities and leaves settlement of these divergent ideas to a special committee for study and a report to the next Assembly.

The Old Sock is out of Date! AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

That ancient prejudice which hoarded gold with the fanatical zeal of the miser has vanished. Under the sheltering wing of AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE flourish thousands of banking institutions to which the individual safely entrusts his wealth.

"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

$462,000 SECURITIES FOUND IN MAIL BOX

All But $50,000 of Stolen Bonds Recovered by Carrier in New York.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch NEW YORK, Sept. 24. — All except $50,000 worth of the $512,000 in securities and bonds which disappeared last Friday while in transit to Milton Alter, 17-year-old messenger for R. V. Hiscoc & Co., were recovered last night in an unexpected way.

Alfred Fontanna, a substitute mail carrier and driver of a collection wagon, making his collections last evening found a neatly wrapped package in a letter box. Because there was no address on the package, Fontanna at first thought boys were playing a joke, but decided to put the package into his wagon. Later he turned the package over to his superiors.

They tore off the paper wrapper and saw a leather wallet such as is carried by a brokerage house messenger. On the flap was inscribed "R. V. Hiscoc & Co."

Inspector Butler ordered the wallet sent to the main postoffice at Thirty-third street and Seventh avenue. He telephoned to Police Commissioner Whalen, who with other officials and detectives, investigating the case, went to the postoffice, checked the recovered securities and bonds with those on the missing list.

The $50,000 worth of missing securities are $1000 and $5000 bonds of the Fabric Finishing Co. of the issue of 1929 6s. Whether they are the bonds reported as negotiable was not determined last night.

Milton Alter has been under arrest since Friday when he reported to Hiscoc & Co. that he had been kidnaped and robbed of $512,000 in securities which he was to bring from the Guaranty Trust Co.

After frequent changes in his story he finally told of the conspiracy, naming David Schwartzberg and Carl Forman. Schwartzberg was arrested. He confessed his part in the bond theft plot and joined with Alter in naming Forman as the leader, police said.

Both Forman and Schwartzberg have police records. Forman is under a suspended sentence for attempting to rob a jewelry store and Schwartzberg is on Federal probation after a conviction for robbing the mails. He and Alter are charged with grand larceny in the securities theft case.

CROWD PURSUES TWO AUTO THIEVES, CAUSES CAPTURE

Dan Duffy and Dan O'Brien Seen as They Make Away With Car in Clayton

Dan Duffy of 4 50 Garfield avenue and Dan O'Brien, 2500 North Sarah street are held in the Clayton jail on charges of larceny of an automobile after a 20-minute chase through the streets of Clayton last night in which they were pursued by more than a dozen citizens on foot and in automobiles.

An errand boy at the Greeninger Pharmacy, 12 North Central avenue, saw two men drive off in the automobile of Virgil Stevenson, 4955 Forest Park boulevard a clerk in the drug store, and his shouts started a group of youths in pursuit. They overhauled the car on Polo drive, near Wydown boulevard, and captured Duffy, who was at the wheel. The other man escaped, but O'Brien was arrested shortly after on an eastbound Clayton car in the vicinity when two youths who took part in the chase pointed him out to police.

all shot to circumvent a "slicer's" wind-agree of expert skill), my methods of breeze are so simple that even novices once they have grasped the following se fundamentals on windy days:

is from such a quarter that it tends to blow the player on to the ball.

he should make sure that the weight is well back on the heels

the address.

There is yet another way of combating the "slicer's" wind. Play the shot with a square or "flat" stance, aim out to the right, and deliberately play for a pull, hitting the ball low.

Courage to Play Shot.

It needs a courageous player—

an expert, indeed—to accomplish this shot. To the beginner it is very much of an "it" stroke, since

if he fails to secure the required pull, the ball soars away to perdition—and finishes wider than an actual slice!

When accomplished successfully,

however, the shot is as effective as it is spectacular. It gives to the maker the satisfying feeling that he has indeed defied the elements.

RACE ENDS IN TIE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BENTON, Ill., Sept. 24.—The Hard Road League race ended in a tie between Benton and Paducah

Benton had held the lead all the way during the second half season which opened on July 7, and most of the fans had long since conceded the Franklin County crew

both pennants, but the leaders allowed their closing game with Am-per to go by default in order to take advantage of an opportunity to play a game with more financial promise. Benton did not take into consideration the postponed game between the southern contenders and the drawing into a tie by the Paducah club was a surprise for them.

This will call for a play-off between these two clubs and this will likely be staged at Paducah on Sunday.

SHARKEY'S LAKE, Pa., Sept. 24.

Jack Sharkey has won up his fight with Jack Sharkey at Sharkey yesterday only lost a fractured rib.

Jack Wolfe had already declined a fractured rib, and Harry Naaton refused to enter the ring, saying that he could stand the body punishment

doled by Loughran any longer.

Loughran has been hitting harder ever before while training

Sharkey. His punches carry the weight of his shoulders tell to him. He has been specializing in punches and there is little chance that he will use this mode of attack in his fight with the Bospunch has been a double left

WRAY'S COLUMN

The Betting Angle.

W E read that more than $2-000,000 will be wagered professionally on the world series. In addition to an ungesurable amount of small bets between friends.

The private betting doesn't interest us. But one wonders if enough money is still being wagered (professionally) to inspire another frame-up like that of the 1919 series, when two of the racketeers tried to skim

the cream through fixing the series.

The professional money bet

today consists of large numbers of small wagers. If a big sum were offered on the bookmaking market, the men handling the wagers would begin to broadcast the fact. Suspicious would arise and memories of 1919 would help break up any coups.

The fact is the disclosures of 1919 have helped make the game safe against future depredations of this sort.

Handlers of big money are on their guard, while the players are probably under closer supervision than ever before. The thorough exposure in the world series of 1919, of the Magee, the Coase and other cases, has completely broken down the efforts of bookmakers to bribe professional players to throw games.

So far as the integrity of organized baseball is concerned,

there is less suspicion attached to it than ever before.

Financiers the Fall Guys.

THE series of 1919 probably did not hit the general public as hard as it hit the financiers.

Financially, the series was a friend and the sum is small.

The tricksters "look" a few smart fellows, men who might bet sums of $100 or more on a baseball series; but even these were not the principal victims.

What made the coup of 1919 possible was the gullibility of men of financial affairs. Rothstein, who cleaned up several hundreds of thousands of dollars, hooked one of the nation's leading oilmen for $50,000 and another financial leader, who specialized in the ownership of famous harness horses for $70,-

000 more. Chicago politicians and sporting celebrities who could afford to lose supplied much of the remainder of the total winnings of Rothstein, estimated at half a million, by Ben

Johnson.

It is significant that one group of gamblers that tried to fix the series and thought they succeeded failed utterly. It was their activities in trying to get their bets down that resulted in exposure. Had it not been for this small fry, the big ones would have got away with it and nobody would have been wiser.

Today it is probable that not even a Rothstein could place

three or four bets big enough to aggregate a quarter of a million dollars.

The explosion of 1919 cleared

LEGGE DEFENDS WORK OF FARM BOARD, ASKS FOR MORE TIME

Reminds Senators That Congress Has Spent Eight Years on Problem, He Has Had Only 2 Months.

HE HAS $1,000,000 IN HARVESTER STOCK

To Be Questioned Further About Holdings Which Also Include General Motors and Burlington.

By RAYMOND F. BRANDT, Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Alexander Legge of Chicago, the former $100,000-a-year president of the International Harvester Co., today appeared for two hours before the Senate Agriculture Committee to tell why he should be confirmed as chairman of the Federal Farm Board.

The other seven members appointed to the board by President Hoover accompanied him to the hearing, and will be put on the stand later.

Legge was instructed to return tomorrow morning for further questioning as to the activities of the board since its creation, July 11.

Severely cross-examined by Senators Brookhart, Wheeler and Hiram, and persistently heckled by Cawley of Arkansas, Legge took responsibility for all the board had done or not done, and asked the committee to give the board time to work out its organization for farm relief.

"Congress has been wrestling with the farm relief problem for eight years," he observed.

Tells of His Holdings.

Legge testified that he still owned approximately $1,000,000 worth of Harvester stock, a small number of General Motors preferred and enough shares of the Burlington Railroad to qualify him as a director. He stated that he had resigned as a director of the Burlington, but did not know whether the resignation, submitted a week or so ago, had been accepted. He said it was not his present intention to divest himself of the Harvester company stock. The remainder of his fortune, he added, was in Government securities.

Legge, a tall, rural-looking man, was at ease before the apparently hostile committee. Behind his narrow, horn-rimmed glasses, he squinted at his interrogators as they put barbed questions to him.

He appeared to have detailed knowledge of all the board had done since its creation. He did not refer to notes or ask his colleagues for specific data.

The questioning developed along three lines, namely, why and how stabilization corporations had not been formed; why was Canadian wheat selling 20 cents to 47 cents higher than comparable American grades; and why had the board been so slow in giving relief to the cotton industry.

Denies Stabilization Statement.

Legge stated that the board's work had not progressed far enough with the co-operation organization of the 10 or 15 stabilization corporations it hoped to form later.

He denied that he had issued a statement that no stabilization corporations would be formed to handle the 1929 crop, but admitted that he had said that the board had "hoped" that none would be necessary this year.

Brookhart declared that when Herbert Hoover had been put in charge of American foodstuffs in 1917, the war-time food dictator had formed corporations that took over the farmers' grain at a fair price within a few days after the authorization had been granted.

Legge replied that Hoover had worked under wartime conditions which did not exist today.

"Do not fool yourself," Legge declared. "Permanent storage facilities for wheat just do not exist. Even if it were possible for the board to buy the surplus wheat and take it off the market, I believe the board could do this only through the stabilization corporations, or the co-operatives. Where would we put it? We cannot store wheat out in the open."

Opp Build Elevators in 60 Days.

When Brookhart declared that the wheat could be stored on the farms, Legge replied that the board urged farmers to retain their wheat for a higher price.

"But the co-operatives cannot

SHEARER'S GENEVA REPORTS SHOW 'OBSERVER' SCENTED PLOTS ON EVERY HAND

In His $25,000 Account of Proceedings He Refers to "Marionette Statesmen" of U. S. "Flattered Into British Plans."

By CHARLES G. ROSS, Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—In the 12 reports which William B. Shearer filed for his employers, three American shipbuilding companies, from Geneva in 1927, and which are now exhibits in the Senate's investigating committee's hearing, he boasted of his success as a big-navy propagandist and enclosed samples of the anti-British and anti-American limitation statements that he had issued. In one report he told a story of dissension in the American delegation, which he attributed to the scheming of a civilian member of the delegation.

Some of these reports officials of the shipbuilding companies say they never have seen, but several of them are stamped "received, general manager Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co., and marked with the date of their receipt."

Even the most cursory examination of the reports and enclosures shows Shearer to have been a very remarkable observer—an observer who passed out the information at one time that there were 10,000 British agents operating in America and at another time issued a statement entitled the "Marine Follies," in which he referred to the "marionette statesmen" of America, who were "petted and flattered into the British plan," and who had "consistently driven nails of steel into America's commercial coffin."

Written in Flowery Style.

Displaying a distinct penchant for flowery and vivid language, he hammered at the British with statements and at his employers with accounts of how he was passing out his "stuff" to the American newspaper correspondents. He sensed all sorts of plots, according to his reports, and in one letter told how it was necessary at times to "take issue and a forceful stand to defeat and offset pressure brought to bear by certain civilian and naval members of the delegation."

One of the statements Shearer distributed and stressed and which was stamped "received, 5 July, 1927," at the office of the general manager of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. was "the Marine Follies," which was in part as follows:

"Glorifying the dance of death inspired by fanatics, who worship self-inflicted torture."

"In North Africa there lives a weird sect of people who believe in self-inflicted torture of many forms, including driving nails into their hands."

"In North America a corresponding sect of people live that outdo their weird brothers: Having completely lost their heads, they drive nails in their commercial coffin and inflict their punishment upon the entire nation."

Shearer then traced the naval and maritime history of the United States as he saw it throughout the World War and then went on, referring to the period after its conclusion, in 1918:

"America was rich. Millions on every corner to cheer our boys transported home under foreign flags as the poppies grew over the graves of our youth in foreign soil envied, hatred and greed flared up; America's power, prestige and influence was endangered."

Assaults Disarmament.

"Our marionette statesmen, true to tradition, had built a mighty fleet to make the world safe for democracy. But America had not reckoned with its host. In 1919 Lloyd George and others demanded our naval strength, calling at Paris they moved their publicity and propaganda batteries to America. The new administration was carefully led up to a disarmament conference. This British made and laid plan was in the hands of Balfour. The inflexible British had discovered our weakness—sentiment, idealism and self."

"Our marionette statesmen were damned before the world, human nature was to be changed, inoculated with the godly impulse, it's better to give than to receive. The made-in-England plan was executed, our navy sacrificed, and against the practical naval expert advice. A new, fanciful sect of pygmies had usurped power. Petted and flattered into the British plan, they have since 1922 consistently driven British nails of steel into America's commercial coffin."

"The crucible that once produced red blood and sturdy hearts will produce a Paul Revere sounding the alarm and riding like hell over these Babylonian architects who would take us from the sea and molding the younger generation for the day of death, a self-inflicted torture of driving sedition nails into the cross of national crucifixion."

After Shearer had issued this statement he sent a letter to Henry C. Hunter in New York, counsel for the American council of American shipbuilders, who brought about the meeting at which Shearer was employed by the shipbuilders, stating that he had distributed 200 copies of it and giving some other information on his work as follows:

"Geneva, July 12, 1927.

"Dear Mr. Hunter:

"Many thanks for your letter with enclosure.

"This show may end abruptly. Gibson has handled our case admirably. This will be the only conference America ever won. Gibson gives the credit to the American press; we have been able to defeat the British propaganda machine and get the figures out.

"The enclosed is the shot I issued on the date of the plenary session which was postponed. The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, has from the start taken the same stand as the New York Times. Col. McCormack, owner of the Chicago Tribune, sent word to Wales, the correspondent here, to shoot all my stuff."

"Sent out 200 copies of the Marine Follies. I issue a statement daily to the leading American correspondents here, including the A. P. and U. P.

"Yours very truly,

"W. B. Shearer."

Six weeks before this he had written Hunter enclosing an article called "Facing Geneva," which he had distributed. This letter was stamped as received by the General Manager of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. June 13, 1927. It follows:

"Geneva, May 26, 1927.

"My Dear Mr. Hunter:

"Watch all articles in New York Times on arms conference and naval base situation.

"Trust you read James' big articles in Times of May 13 and 14, which were reflections of my views. Also hope you read articles sent Williams (the Times correspondent here), printed in the New York Times tomorrow, May 27, which is also my views and suggestions for strong man, James of Reed given him."

"Have sent out 250 copies of enclosed, including all newspapers. Mr. Ochs, owner of the Times, now in Europe, has issued orders to all correspondents to play up naval situation."

"I consider best move to pound on naval bases to offset the British thesis on cruiser situation."

"Engineering," London, printing my article on "Imperialistic Peace."

"W. B. SHEARER."

The article to which he referred as having been sent the magazine "Engineering" discussed the cruiser bill in the Sixty-ninth Congress. He quoted from previous issue of "Engineering" a statement as follows:

"During the first month of 1924 the American fleet carried out maneuvers in the Panama Canal zone and whilst the maneuvers were in progress the press started a sudden violent campaign upon the subject of American naval weakness. While this agitation was in full blast the official umpires of the maneuvers issued a report which so substantiated the clamor previously raised by Mr. Shearer that no further gains were made possibly doubt that the naval service was deeply interested in the press campaign."

To this he replied as follows:

"As I am the culprit named as leader of the agitation, I am also the most able to state the reasons."

"In 1922 the United States voluntarily surrendered the supremacy of the seas—our price for naval disarmament and peace. As our tons of guns were sunk or destroyed, we recognized the essentials of a foreign naval strategy were to scrap what America had and force ahead with the types of ship they possessed in great numbers—those types which mean naval supremacy and were not included in the treaty."

"Realizing I must be prepared to support this position I assume, and to allay suspicion which often takes the place of fair reasoning, I give the true reasons for actions and endeavors, past and present:

"First, I am a nationalist. Second, the United States navy has proved to be under the treaty ratio as understood and pledged."

"Controlled by Nobody."

"The patriotic organizations and societies of the United States who have encouraged and indorsed my stand are many. My actions are not governed or controlled by anybody, least of all the United States navy. The congressional records all show my efforts or action were often opposed by the Navy Department."

On June 2 Shearer wrote Hunter again, explaining how he was getting his stuff across, as follows:

"Geneva, June 2, 1927.

"Dear Mr. Hunter: New York Times cable story of 1000 words

ARENA DEDICATED AT BANQUET; 3000 PERSONS PRESENT

Size and Proportions of $1,500,000 Show Place on Oakland Avenue Impress the Diners.

MILLER AND HYDE AMONG SPEAKERS

Charles L. Hill of Rosendale, Wis., Tells of Dairy Exposition to Be Held in Building Oct. 12.

It was an Arena-minded throng that dedicated the new $1,500,000 exhibition canopy on Oakland avenue last night.

It was also a dairy-minded crowd, for speakers saturated it with facts and figures about the industry, bigger than steel or motors, which will open its national exhibition in the new building and its auxiliary barns Oct. 12. It was air-minded and sports-minded, for it heard about the National Aircraft Show and boxing matches which will be seen there this season.

But the Arena itself was the big thing to the 3000 dinner guests. No matter how often they had viewed the exterior from Forest Park drive, or however much they had read of its dimensions, the first look within was a revelation of size and symmetry, and the sense of both grew as they gazed.

Vast Interior.

The arena is so big that the diners, seated at the largest indoor banquet ever held in St. Louis, were but a minor fraction of the 21,000 persons whom the building will hold. It is so big that the orchestra gallery, which held 50 musicians and can hold 25 more, looked like the entrance to a small observation platform. It is so big that the band could play while the chairman was speaking—though the chairman considered this part of the demonstration not a success. It is even so big that Mayor Miller and Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, who as Governor six years ago fired Miller from his Police Board job, could and did speak on the same program without getting close enough to renew their quarrel.

Up near the long diamond-shaped lattices of the oval dome, colored lights gave moonlight effects while the diners ate, not a dairy lunch, but a lavish chicken dinner, as the speaking began, the moonlight brightened into a sun-bath of illumination.

The head table went completely about the floor, being in the box seats. It was just for 300 and they were almost all men. But at the floor tables, occasional close-fitting hats and tanned bare arms showed that femininity had crashed what was to have been the biggest of stag parties.

So it had to be "Ladies and Gentlemen" for the speakers—other than the women's presence probably did not affect the program. The president of the organization, Mayor Miller and Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, who as Governor six years ago fired Miller from his Police Board job, could and did speak on the same program without getting close enough to renew their quarrel.

Cauffield's Dairy Speech.

Gov. Cauffield started out in oratorical style, and made the sounding boards rattle for awhile. He told of Missouri's advance in dairying. "Today," he said, "Missouri stands sixth in total number of pure bred cattle among the states; fifth in total number of Jerseys, and one county, Jasper, has more breeders of pure-bred Jerseys than any other county in the United States. The value of dairy products coming from Missouri cattle in 1928 is estimated at more than $75,000,000."

The Governor told of climatic conditions in Missouri which favor dairying, and said there has been no overproduction. "Dairying is the Eastern states," he said, "through the introduction of automotive tractors, are sending their whole fresh milk into the cities for family consumption, where a more profitable market awaits the producer. The manufacturer who formerly depended upon the Eastern product to supply their cheese and butter factories and whole milk plants are now seeking fields for production that are more favorable to them. Missouri is the place for them."

RAIN HOLDS SOVIET PLANE ON ATTU IN ALEUTIANS

Flyers Prevented From Taking Off for Dutch Harbor on Trip to United States.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 24.—With rain and wind at Dutch Harbor on Unalaska Island in the Aleutians, the Russian biplane "Land of the Soviets" apparently was still grounded at Attu today, 752 miles away. The plane was to have hopped for Dutch Harbor yesterday on its 12,000-mile journey from Moscow to New York.

Coast Guard cutters were at Dutch Harbor, ready to aid the plane in its flight down the west coast of North America.

Radio stations at Everett, Seattle and Bremerton had failed to receive any advices from the plane. Attempts are being made to get into communication with Capt. C. S. Cochran, commanding the Bering Sea patrol of the Coast Guard, stationed at Dutch Harbor, who was thought to be receiving word of the plane's position.

A low pressure area over the Bering Sea, which started yesterday, was expected to force the four Soviet airmen to postpone leaving Attu until more favorable weather set in.

Hyde Jokes Over Job.

Secretary Hyde talked in gossamer fashion about the comment made on his selection for the Cabinet. "Some have asked me how I accounted for my appointment," he related. "I don't account for it—I accept it, on the same basis on which allowance is made for a percentage of error in all engineering work. But the man who said I didn't know an onion from a tuberose went too far."

The Secretary said he hoped there was no ill will between St. Louis and Kansas City over any matter of unequal distribution of hard highways, as the chairman had suggested. Otherwise, he might fear that the "wedding of St. Louis"

SENATE TAKES UP FLEXIBLE SECTION OF TARIFF BILL

Smoot Argues That President Should Be Granted Power to Adjust Certain Rates.

TWO AMENDMENTS TO PLAN APPROVED

One Prohibits Importation of Articles Trade Marked in United States but Made Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Consideration of the flexible section of the tariff bill, over which Democrats and Republicans are in dispute, was begun in the Senate late today with Chairman Smoot of the Finance Committee urging its approval.

Under this section the President is given power to adjust tariff rates upon recommendation of the Tariff Commission and without Congressional action.

Such authority exists under present law but a number of Democrats have advocated its elimination from the pending bill.

The Senate earlier adopted a committee amendment to the tariff bill to bar importation of goods manufactured abroad bearing American trade marks.

The vote was 46 to 31. Party lines were split on the ballot.

The Senate then adopted without a record vote another committee amendment to prohibit entry of foreign-made goods, on which Americans own the patents.

By unanimous consent, the Senate was called an hour earlier today than usual, with the hope of clearing the way of amendments regarded as presenting only minor points of controversy.

G. B. S. In The Future.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
BEING, with regard to Bernard Shaw, as far as the other side of the coin is possible for a rationalist to go, I feel compelled to say something in favor of his claim to immortality.

You, and your perfunctory critic, are probably right about the matter. Shaw habitually deals with subjective arguments of politics and economics are not attractive to many in this tin-pot age. We know that Shaw has always said that the public suspected him of clowning most when he was most in earnest. And, perhaps, it is this pseudo-clowning which accounts for his present popularity.

But it is in the man's potential prophetic genius that you overlook his chief prospect for notice from future generations. You know, we may not always be so intellectually immature. Sometimes the Life Force may lift the race up out of its rut and actually set it on the high road to its aspirations. Then, when honest politics and economics become a subject of general conversation, will not people go back in wonder and delight to the writings of the first man who wrote of such things authentically in clear, understandable language? Plato, Pythagoras, Marx, George et al., were good, too, but they lacked the penetration, information, wit, humor and provocative showmanship of our G. B. S.

Union Market.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I DON'T blame Will Doctor for trying to kid himself along, but the so-called Union Market is dead, although arrangements for floral offerings have not been completed.

The facts are, when the big retail merchants migrated westward, they decided to kill all the retail trade on Broadway by turning the store buildings on Broadway and Franklin into warehouses and using the sidewalks for driveways.

After that happened, the city goes to work and spends a huge sum of money for a retail market.

Can you imagine that?

Bullet and Airplane Speed.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
IN the Post-Dispatch of Saturday, Sept. 14, you have a letter in your editorial columns from Chaplain Nathaniel A. Jones of Jefferson Barracks, correcting your error in an editorial concerning the airplane speed of 325 miles per hour as compared with the speed of a bullet. When Chaplain Jones stated that the speed was only about half that of a service automatic pistol bullet and one-fifth that of the service rifle bullet, he gave fair averages. Your editorial note warrants correction if I may offer it, since you say that your earlier statement was correct and that the airplane speed was "about the speed of a bullet from a comparatively 'slow' pistol."

One might think that the little .22-caliber revolver would have the slowest speed, but the velocity of even the little .22 short in a revolver is 750 feet per second. That same bullet gains about 120 feet per second more in a rifle barrel. The .38 short Colt cartridge, rare and little used, is the slowest standard load. Its muzzle velocity is 610 feet per second. The .38 Smith & Wesson cartridge, much more common, has a velocity of 630, while the .32 Smith and Wesson velocity is 622.

The Army .45 automatic, contrary to your statement, is not one of the fastest. It averages 810 feet per second whereas the .38 automatic pistol has a velocity of 1120 F. S., the 9 mm. Luger, a common arm in this country, has a velocity of 1040. The 7.63 mm. Mauser velocity is 1206, while the 7.63 mm. Mauser pistol, also a common arm here, has a velocity of 1395. Over 20 years ago the famous old Cowboy Six-Gun threw its .45 Colt slug of lead at a velocity of 770 feet per second with obsolete black powder.

Accordingly you will see that Waghorn has not as yet achieved the speed of a bullet. The velocity of 325 miles per hour, translated into feet per second, gives the figure of 451.12. The plane speed was far below the speed of the slowest bullets, and about one-third the speed of the fastest automatic pistol bullets. American-made rifles have velocities as high as 2300 feet per second, or roughly 2200 miles per hour. Therefore it is doubtful if airplanes can ever be made to overtake bullets. When they have plane speed pushed up to 1000 miles per hour, bullet speeds will be up to 3000 or more.

MR. HOOVER ON TEMPERANCE

Mr. Hoover's views on temperance have been awaited with a great deal of curiosity ever since he went into the White House. It was impossible in the heat of a presidential campaign to determine how far the prohibitionists were justified in believing that he was to be the Moses who would lead them out of the wilderness. He had, it is true, characterized prohibition in complimentary terms. He had not said how practicable he thinks it is. Therefore, his message to the W. C. T. U. National convention a few days ago assumes significance. He said:

Since the adoption of the prohibition amendment, too many people have come to rely wholly upon the strong arm of the law to enforce abstinence, forgetting that the cause of temperance has its strong foundations in the conviction of the individual of the personal value to himself of temperance in all things.

If we may judge by this, Mr. Hoover does not belong to a powerful school of American thought which holds that enforcement of law automatically follows enactment. Many detached observers have remarked that this is the chief characteristic of the liquor problem in the United States, notwithstanding the American people are said to have nullified more laws in 150 years than any other people in history. Mr. Hoover is disposed to credit the law with no more power than it actually possesses. This is a contradiction of his position of a few months ago that if we are to select only such laws as we are going to respect and disregard the rest the law as an institution is doomed. The difference is that he was in the one case merely theoretical, whereas in the other he is practical.

If the prohibitionists are wise, they will ponder well these words of the President. The special committee of Mr. Hoover's Crime Commission which is studying prohibition can no more meet the expectations of the prohibitionists than Mr. Hoover has met them. The committee cannot say that prohibition is enforceable, and if it did say so it would only make itself ridiculous. The situation is by this time so concrete as to make it morally certain what is to happen. Indeed, it has already happened. The prohibition law is disregarded where the people do not want it, and it is regarded where the people do want it. Mrs. Willebrandt came to the conclusion after years of active service as the Government's prohibition prosecutor that this law, like any other law, is only effective where it enjoys the consent of the governed.

Our experience with the question is going to be valuable. As a writer in the New Republic of two weeks ago said: "We are going to learn from it something we need to know about the nature of law."

THE TRUTH ABOUT SWORDFISH.

This marlin swordfish situation may as well be cleared up now. Everywhere we hear newspaper readers scoff at the pictures of six-foot monsters with their deadly looking beaks, alleged to have been caught with ordinary light tackle. It is undermining public confidence in the press.

The simple truth is that the swordfish is caught just that way. The marlin, which is running heavily near Catalina Island now, is a hollow fraud. Far from being the dangerous foe he appears, he is a boob who gets panicky when the little barb sinks into his gums and simply wears himself out thrashing around the surface of the water. A smarter fish, like the tuna, dives deeply when hooked and sulks for hours, darting sharply now and then snapping the line. But the swordfish hasn't sense enough for that.

He is also a bully who delights in steaming full throttle into a school of mackerel, slashing ruthlessly this way and that with his sharp "sword" beak. What is more, he has a slender caudal peduncle, according to the new Britannica. A pox on a fish with a slender caudal peduncle. Is the way we look at it.

No man is wholly bad, and Harry Sinclair admits his health is good.

NAVAL PARITY THROUGH LATIN EYES.

Italy now joins France in viewing with alarm the Anglo-American discussions looking to naval parity between the two English-speaking nations and limitation of their sea forces. The negotiations are worrying Paris and Rome into nightmares of Anglo-Saxon maritime control. Newspapers close to the Quai d'Orsay last week expressed fears of a pending political earthquake directed against France. Now the official Tribune at Rome openly attacks the proposed pact as "a most prodigious and disgusting lie." Such frank language, devoid of the usual diplomatic embroidery, shows how Italy's fears are aroused.

Such suspicions would seem to an observer on this side of the water to be sheer nonsense. Before the World War, Germany and England were the great rival navy builders. It is beyond the stretch of imagination to conceive a panic in America if those two nations had begun negotiations for a naval holiday. The two Latin countries, however, have been brought up on the continental variety of diplomacy. When Ministers of other Powers get their heads together, it can mean to them only new alliances, indubitably directed against all outsiders.

Both President Hoover and Premier MacDonald are openly on record in stating their purpose to be the lifting of the burden of armaments from their nations. Premier and President are backed unanimously by their peoples in this purpose. Such openness of motive is contrary to the Old World idea, however, and is received with doubts by France and Italy, whose people have been deceived by the treaty makers all too often.

MOVIE ADVERTISING.

The idea of honesty in advertising seems to have gotten around to almost everybody but the motion picture exhibitors. These gentlemen still hold to the theory that the public is entirely jazz and sex crazy and won't hear of anything not related to booze, cheating and wild parties. So the picture, regardless of its plot or treatment, is too often described in red ink, the most innocuous of fantasies being whooped up in terms suggestive of carnality and abandon, to attract the boobies.

Well, the boobies are not that simple. The emptiest headed movie goer has long since learned that the most unreliable guide to a picture is a lurid advertisement. The blasts serve no purpose. They do offend the public's sense of decency and proportion.

Since the talkies have crowded the dumbies off the lot, and the stage persons have supplanted most of the movie persons, those pictures which deal with gossip subjects have received that restrained treatment which characterizes the theater. This has indeed been a relief, and it is too bad the exhibitors cannot see their way to making it unanimous.

BUNCO SHEARER AND HIS "VICTIMS."

The great captains of industry controlling the ship-building companies that employed William B. Shearer to represent them at the Geneva disarmament conference have made their defense. Their defense is that Shearer succeeded in playing them for a lot of boobs. It is a feeble excuse, and we believe Senator Borah characterized it properly when he said it was an insult to the country's intelligence. The great captains of industry doubtless are more respectable in many respects than Shearer, but his explanation of his employment is the more plausible. He says he was employed, first, to wreck the disarmament conference; and, second, to lobby at Washington for the construction of more ships of war.

One of Shearer's employers was the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, a subsidiary of Bethlehem Steel. Its president, S. W. Wakeman, accepts full responsibility for that company's part in the transaction. He says Shearer was hired as "an observer and reporter," in the belief that he could obtain information concerning the conference which would not be available to the newspaper correspondents. Wakeman also felt that Shearer's viewpoint would be closer to that of the shipbuilders than that of the correspondents. In the latter instance, there is no doubt Wakeman was right. Shearer has been notorious for years as a professional jingo. He was one of the sponsors of Miguel Avila, source of the forged documents which the Hearst newspapers published for the purpose of fomenting trouble between this country and Mexico. If Wakeman knew anything about Shearer, he knew his record and his business. If he knew nothing about him, he was not justified in employing him in such a connection.

His assertion that Shearer was expected to obtain information not available to the press, is not impressive; and if it is true, it is a confession of unblushing impudence. The shipbuilders were not entitled to inside information about the disarmament conference. All the information which they could legitimately require was available from the Government and the press. But, we repeat, the statement that he was employed for that purpose is not impressive. Shearer's character as a promoter of war and war scares was entirely too well known.

Of course, Shearer's claim of influence in connection with the passage of the 15-cruiser bill will be accepted at its true value, which is little more than nothing; but it does show again vividly the character of some of the elements which are arrayed in support of that kind of legislation. If Shearer was not responsible for the enactment of the bill, it was not because he didn't want to be.

Like most such scandals, this one has a compensating aspect. It has enormously strengthened the hand of President Hoover in his efforts to reduce naval armaments. It has shown the nature of some of the influences which are opposing his work. For a time, at least, warship builders will be extremely wary about exerting themselves to thwart a humanitarian movement which might diminish their profits. And the public might do well to ponder the wisdom of eliminating such temptations by ordaining that all war vessels be built by the Government.

SENATOR HOWELL HEDGES.

Senator Howell of Nebraska has hedged. That was a bold utterance on the floor of the Senate that prohibition could be enforced in Washington if the President wanted it enforced. But when Mr. Hoover promptly and properly requested Mr. Howell to furnish the facts of violation on which the Government could act the Senator's reply was disappointingly feeble.

In our judgment the President has acted most commendably in the circumstances, albeit to a degree naive. The national capital is notorious for "making the laws it flouts and flouting the laws it makes." It is inconceivable that Mr. Hoover, after his long residence there, can entertain any illusion as to the force of prohibition at the seat of Government. It is not necessary for a member of the Senate to tell the President what the condition is. The violation of the liquor laws at Washington by the men who enact those laws for the rest of the country is contemptible and vicious. It makes the whole nation ridiculous, as it has just made both Mr. Hoover and Senator Howell ridiculous.

Mr. Schwab said he would like to see all armaments sunk to the bottom of the sea. With Observer Shearer aboard?

TREE-PLANTING IN ST. LOUIS.

We learn with pleasure that the Chamber of Commerce Civic Development Bureau has undertaken, through a special committee, a program for replacing decayed or destroyed trees in St. Louis and for planting new ones. Trees have been given short shrift in American cities, with the notable exception of Washington, and we are only now beginning to realize the loss.

The Chamber of Commerce bureau has acted wisely in choosing August E. Brooker as chairman of the committee. Mr. Brooker is president of the St. Louis Horticultural Society, a semi-scientific body, and therefore is peculiarly fitted to undertake the work of applying some elementary landscaping principles to our municipal plans. With proper co-operation, the committee may be expected to do a monumental piece of work.

One of the committee's immediate objectives is to see that trees are planted on streets which are now being widened or which will be widened in the near future. It is an ironic commentary on our carelessness with regard to the city's appearance that property owners are being paid for trees that must be removed in street widening projects, but no plans have been made to replace them. Mr. Brooker's committee will do something about that. It will also interest itself in the reforestation of Forest Park. Park Commissioner Pape might well take advantage of the committee's assistance in this regard.

We repeat that, with proper co-operation, the committee will do a monumental job. We stress the need of co-operation. Here is a task that should interest and engage the efforts of home owners, school children, even owners of business property. If a system of tree-planting could be applied to St. Louis streets, this city would be the envy of the country. We look forward with eagerness to the committee's work, and we trust that the community will take full advantage of its suggestions. The latter is the necessary premise to success.

SENATOR HOWELL: "I SMELL THE DEMON RUM."

Wisconsin's Power Fight

Battle lines form for gigantic struggle over program which challenges private ownership of generating and distributing facilities; advocates hold theory that power is natural resource to be held in trust for people; difference between price of money to state and to private corporations, if amortized over 20-year period, would retire entire investment in public-owned utilities.

Alvin C. Reis in the Nation.

LAST spring a conservative Wisconsin daily remarked: "If anyone doubts that the battle lines are now forming in Wisconsin for perhaps the most significant struggle in a decade, he has only to inform himself of the hearings held during the past week in the Assembly Committee on Judiciary." Those hearings concerned the new public power program which challenges the private ownership of Wisconsin's electric power. The program, which has attracted national attention, embraced three proposals:

1. A constitutional amendment enabling the State of Wisconsin to recapture its water power. Practically the whole of the State's water power is now owned by private interests. The amendment would enable the State to acquire by gift, purchase and condemnation, and may own, convey, construct, develop, extend, improve, add to, conduct, manage, control and operate water powers and electric utilities; and may generate, distribute, buy and sell heat, light, water, or power directly or indirectly. To carry out the purposes of this section the State shall have all the powers incident and necessary thereto, including the power to borrow money.

For the purpose of promoting the wider use of electricity in the home and on the farm and for the purpose of promoting the industrial development of the State by providing abundant electric power, the State may acquire by gift, purchase and condemnation, and may own, convey, construct, develop, extend, improve, add to, conduct, manage, control and operate water powers and electric utilities; and may generate, distribute, buy and sell heat, light, water, or power directly or indirectly. To carry out the purposes of this section the State shall have all the powers incident and necessary thereto, including the power to borrow money.

In the 1927 Legislature this proposal was introduced; it passed the Assembly 70 to 13, and was killed in the Senate 20 to 10. In the 1929 session this constitutional amendment was again introduced. It passed the Assembly 71 to 13. On July 21 it was killed in the Senate by the vote of 17 to 15—a single vote! The amendment will be introduced in the 1931 session and I believe that it will pass.

What is the basis of this proposed constitutional provision? The political philosophy behind it is that water power is a natural resource to be held in trust by the State for the benefit of all the people rather than to be alienated to private interests. There is, moreover, a substantial business argument for State ownership and operation of its water power. Guy Tripp, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Westinghouse Company, is authority for the statement that 80 per cent of the cost of producing electricity from water power consists of fixed charges, which are principally dividends on stock and interest on bonds. That fact is not true of any other productive business. In the ordinary manufacturing business the elements which go to make up the cost are mainly labor and material. In the mining business it is practically all labor and transportation. Go into any ordinary manufacturing plant and you will find

TOONEVILLE NOTE.

From Kay Features.
ELECTRICITY travels at the rate of 11,600,000 miles a minute. You would never guess it ran the street cars.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.

BACK in 1880 the third district of Virginia had as its Representative in Congress a man named J. E. Johnston. Little has come down about Johnston's record there. There is no one particularly interested one way or the other. But it is known at this time that he was a 17-year-old boy living in Hanover County who impressed him. The boy went on to go to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, where Johnston decided to appoint him.

The boy was Hilary P. Jones—now Rear Admiral and the Navy's foremost expert on naval limitations. Those who were classmates of Jones at Annapolis said that he was the most liked man in his class. Everyone called him "Pete," and his friends still use it as a speaking of him.

Young Jones was not long in making known his ability, once out of the academy. He had been serving on the U. S. S. Stetson and later was performing coast survey duty on the U. S. S. Baché when in 1893 he was ordered to the Nipic.

A hurricane of great violence assailed the ship on the night of March 16, 1893. With her were the Trenton and the Vandalia. Also anchored there were four vessels of the British navy and three German warships.

He did it. The Nipic was successfully beached, and although badly damaged, was able to proceed after the storm had abated. After it was all over the commanding officer reported officially: "He stood bravely at his post by his side on the poop through all the storm, rain and volumes of smoke, when at times we could see but a few feet ahead, as the building smoke and heat were simply frightful. Mr. Jones is a young officer of great promise, and bids fair to be of value to the service and his country."

NOVEMBER 14, 1927, saw the culmination of 47 years of service to his country on the part of Admiral Jones. Twenty-eight of those years were spent in active sea duty.

He was retired at that time. But that did not mean the ending of his naval or active duty when needed, either for consultation or to represent the Navy at a disarmament session, as he has done twice before. Admiral Jones served as a member of the American delegation to the 1927 Geneva naval conference, and now has been called back to duty during the discussions with Great Britain.

GREAT HIGH MAN. By Louise (Laquana).
This new biography of Sir Walter Scott is written in the modern manner of humanizing or popularizing the great men of the past. Mrs. Scott makes no contribution to what readers of Lockhart's biography and of Scott's own letters already know of his life and character, but the book is pleasantly written and to the reader who is already well acquainted with the life of the man, it gives a new source with the life of the man.

There is a pretty account of the romance of Scott's married life, for his first wife married some time before he was twenty. The writer brings out in a readable fashion Scott's interest and enjoyment in the magnificent estate he established at Abbotsford, and the courage with which he confronted financial disaster, the great courage of the man who would turn his imaginative power to money and who could not be rushed.

The book gets its name from the prediction of Charlotte, his wife, at the beginning of Scott's career, that he was certain to become "a great rich man." He did become a great rich man, but he was not a great man. It is a pity that the book is so permanent.

The author in her estimate of Scott at the end of her book says: "No poet with head in the clouds, no man with a wider sense than she had of the world's rewards. A plain man, a honest man, he wrote as he lived, with a healthy vigor beside which genius seemed to have a sickly hue. . . . He died as he had lived, a great rich man. . . . It is all very true, no doubt, but it is far as it goes. But it does not go far enough or deep enough, and leaves the reader unsatisfied. The true greatness of Scott is better interpreted in the brief biography written for the English edition of Letters series by Richard H. Hutton. Says Hutton in his final summing up: "And it was because the man was so much greater than the ends for which he strove that there is a sort of grandeur in the magic fate which denied them to him, and yet exhibited to all the world the infinite superiority of the man who strove for the ends of the world. There are those who like their great men to be popularized in the light, airy, superficial fashion of modern biography. Again, there are those who do not."

FERD GOTTLIER.
THE ROMANCE OF THE RAILS. By Agnes C. Laut. (McBride).
THESE two volumes, splendid specimens of the art of printing and binding, are worthy of a better content. The author attempts a shapely account of the development of the railroads of America from their small beginnings a century ago to the banking of the St. Paul in the present decade. A reader with a bias toward accuracy will find little of interest.

The oft-told story of the Vanderbilt-Gould-Plak fight over Erie is more rehearsed, this time from the "romantic" angle. So, too, is the later Harriman-Hill feud, and the sordid story of the building of Union Pacific. The author affects a verbose rhetoric more befitting a history supplement than the dignity of historic record, and the narrative is such a hodge-podge of trivial anecdote, misplaced eulogy and the like, that the reader is left with a sense of disappointment. The book is a good example of the kind of history that is written for the general public, and it is a pity that it is so poorly written.

Of Making Many Books

JOHN G. NEIHARDT

Literary Dux and Bradstreet

By Louise

Scott (Lafayette)

Scott's new biography of Sir Walter

Scott is written in the modern manner of humanizing or humanizing the great men of the past. Mrs. Scott makes no contribution to what readers of Lock-port's biography and of Scott's own biography already know of his life and character, but the book is pleasantly written and is high in entertainment value to the reader who is not already well acquainted with other sources with the life of the robust Scott.

There is a pretty account of the romance of Scott—romances rather than love married sometimes. The writer brings out in valuable fashion Scott's interest in the magnificent state established at Abbotford,

the country with which he continued financial disaster, the great consequence of the man who could turn his imaginative power into money and who could not be crushed.

The book gets its name from the reputation of Charlotte, his wife, who was certain to become

"the great rich man." He did become rich in a wider sense than she had imagined, but his financial riches were not so permanent.

The author in her estimate of Scott at the end of her book says that the poet's head in the clouds was no more romantic indifference to the world's rewards. A plain man, an honest man, he wrote as he lived—with a healthy vigor beside which genius seemed to have a solid base. He died as he had lived—a great rich man."

There are those who like their great men to be popularized in the light, airy, superficial fashion of modern biography. Again, there are those who do not.

THE ROMANCE OF THE RAILS

By Agnes C. Laut. (McBride.)

These two volumes, splendid specimens of the art of printing and binding, are worthy of a better content. The author attempts a rhapsodic account of the development of the railroads of America from their small beginnings a century ago to the bankruptcy of the St. Paul in the present decade. A reader with a bias against accuracy will find little of interest.

The oft-told story of the Vanderbilt's fight with Erie is more re-hashed, this time from a

"romantic" angle. So, too, is the later Harriman-Hill feud, and the sordid story of the building of the Pacific. The author affects verbose rhetoric more befitting a

Sunday supplement than the dignity of historic record, and the narative is such a hodge-podge of anecdote, misplaced eulogy

and

and

NO CHANCE OF DIRECT

AIR MAIL EAST TILL JULY

Even if Granted Now, It Would Take That Long to Light

Route, Cochran Is Told.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.

201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Even if the direct airmail service from

New York to St. Louis and the southwest is authorized in the near future, operation cannot possibly start until after July 1, 1930, Representative John J. Cochran of St. Louis said yesterday after a conference with Assistant Postmaster General W. Irving Glover.

Glover told Cochran that the delay in rendering a final decision on the application of St. Louis for a direct route was due to a change of personnel in the Commerce Department aeronautical branch. Immediately after Major Clarence M.

Young is installed as Assistant Secretary of Commerce in charge of aviation, the interdepartmental committee will decide regarding the St. Louis route.

"Installation of a lighting system along the proposed route would prevent inauguration of direct service with New York before

July 1, even though the service was authorized," said Cochran.

"The Postoffice Department says

it would be almost impossible to install the lights before that time.

Only a small part of the route is now served by lights.

"Mr. Glover showed where the Department of Commerce has been over a year installing lights in the State of Washington along one route and the work cannot be completed until March if then.

"Thus it will be seen that if the Department should not act favorably on the St. Louis-New York route now it would probably be at least two years before direct service could be expected."

Cochran said he would suggest to the Senators representing the states to be served that they make a final appeal to the Department.

He added that the establishment of the New York-St. Louis route would mean also the establishing of the St. Louis-Texas route at the same time. The Texas route depends upon the success of the St. Louis-New York application.

FIFTEENTH CENTURY TAPESTRY

GIVEN TO BOSTON MUSEUM

BOSTON, Sept. 24.—A fifteenth century Gothic tapestry has been acquired by the Boston Museum of Fine Arts as a gift from Robert

Treat Paine II.

Paine purchased the tapestry this summer from Knole House in Kent, considered the most nearly perfect surviving example of domestic architecture of Tudor England.

For more than 400 years the tapestry hung in the chapel of this baronial residence, having been presented to Knole early in the sixteenth century by Archbishop

Wareham, then its owner.

The tapestry, 29 feet long and 14 feet high, was woven about

1490, possibly for a cathedral. In

NEW YORK Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.

NEW YORK has for years snubbed anything smacking of civic boosting. It has the superior notion there is no need to emphasize the wonders. With an arched and phony little smile it left that for Babbitts and Rotarians

in the high grass.

Lately, however, has come a sudden realization the metropolis might indulge in a little professional glad-handing. There is no denying business was off this summer on account of the lack of tourists.

A mistaken idea is abroad New York should be avoided in hot weather.

As a matter of fact, outside of the fall season the most delightful

period is between the first of June and the first of September. There are sporadic heat waves, but nights are cool. The metropolis is within an hour of innumerable seaside resorts.

Hotels are worst sufferers when the "floating population" refuses to float. And such stagnation hits other business. The Merchant's

Association is aroused to the situation and is out to sell the big town to the rest of the country with a few California-like whoops.

Most of us who live in New York acquire a smug distrust. We stintly see so many strangers we grow totally unconscious of their presence until they go elsewhere.

A stiff-necked attitude is little help in increasing holidaying tourists.

High-nosed boasts of Manhattan's marvels are scarcely necessary. These are apparent. But a little thawing out and cross-road back-slapping is obviously needed. The chief complaint against

New York has always been it is cold and scrupulously distant.

The Merchants' Association is asking citizens to timber up to show more consideration to the courtesy toward the stranger. It appeals especially to taxi drivers and policemen. New York extends itself toward foreign nobodies and neglects its countrymen. It is pay-

and Kansas City," which was a ceremonial event of his term as Governor, had been merely a companionable affair.

Then the secretary took up his manuscript, saying he had to read it, and that those who wished to leave might do so. But the prepared speech proved to be a crisp and interesting account of the rise of dairying from a despised farm chore to the position of America's greatest industry.

"The value of the raw material furnished by the humble cow," he said, "and of the products derived therefrom, far exceed in value the product of any other industry. Last year the farm value of American dairy products was $2,000,000,000. The milk produced on American farms weighed 60,000,000 tons. This is twice the weight of all the pig iron produced by the greatest industrial nation on earth."

Some Comparisons
"The United States is the second largest gold-producing nation. It would take 10 years to equal the value of one year's dairy production. Our gold reserve is about four times as large as that of any other nation in the world. It is just about large enough to pay for the milk annually yielded by American dairy cows."

"We produce 60 per cent of the world's cotton. We grow enough wheat to satisfy all of our domestic needs, and to export from 200,000,000 to 300,000,000 bushels in addition. We harvest enough potatoes to feed 120,000,000 people. Yet the farm value of all our cotton, all our wheat and all our potatoes combined does not equal the farm value of our dairy production."

"Measured in terms of people employed, capital invested, or value produced, dairying is our greatest agricultural pursuit. Dairy products account for 26 per cent of the gross value of all agricultural pursuits, including both crops and livestock. "Farm values, however, are only the beginning of the values based on dairying. There are more than 4000 creameries, nearly 3000 cheese factories, more than 200 condenser and many thousands of ice cream factories and other milk processing plants. Out of a part of our annual milk supply, these industrial plants turn out products valued at nearly $4,000,000,000.

Greater Than Auto Industry.
The annual output of the automobile factories of America is about $2,500,000,000. It has been called America's greatest industry. The value of the output of the steel industry is less than that of the automobile factories, yet steel has been called the barometer of American business. The annual value of all the building done in the United States is less than either of the other two so-called leaders.

The product of no one of the three is equal to the value of the manufactured products based upon milk as a raw material.

"One-fifth of our annual expenditure for food goes for dairy products. When we reflect upon the large part which butter, cheese and clean, pure milk play in the diets of infants and adults alike, and how vitally necessary they are in the sickroom, dairying becomes most of the greatest."

He told of the economics of the dairy industry, and the place of American dairying in international trade. Dairying suffered less than other farm activities from the agricultural depression, he said, and is "the only branch of agriculture in which the farm price of its products exceeds the index of retail commodities bought by the farmer." He credited tariff protection with having given the dairy industry almost complete possession of the home market.

"The hope of dairying, and the model for other branches of agriculture," Secretary Hyde says, "lie in the further development of co-operative organizations, and he believes further tariff protection for importation is increasing. The latest figures, those of 1927, showed total imports equaling about 1 per cent of the domestic production, indicating, in Hyde's view, that it is time for further tariff measures."

Ben G. Brinkman, president of the National Exhibition Co., chief of the evening, was the last speaker, and got a prolonged greeting.

"The Arena was not a project of mine, or of any single individual," he said. "The National Dairy Show was offered to St. Louis a group of Shive leaders responded, and the result of their efforts is before you. In order to adapt these buildings to purposes other than the dairy show we from time to time added improvements, so that our original estimates as to cost were practically doubled and we now present a completed plant second to none in the United States."

Pagant Closes Program.
The program ended with a pagant, with a shining armored spirit of St. Louis as announcer. The purpose was to show the various uses to which the building is to be put. Show girls were kept busy changing from dairy-maid dresses to jockey suits, then to grand opera, circus, boxing and aircraft costumes. There was also advance notice of the spectacle to be staged for the benefit of the Child Conservation Conference.

George H. Holcombe, designer and manager of the building, who is also a musician, took a turn at leading the band, which played a march of his composition, dedicated to the dairy show. The band was contributed by the Musicians' Union.

Some of the speakers declared the Arena the largest enclosure of its kind in the United States. Weinberger called it the largest but one, that one being Madison Square Garden, New York. The Arena building is 476 feet long and 276 feet wide in exterior dimensions. The interior, ring covered with tanbark and used as the space for diners, and not including the surrounding box space, is 276 feet long and 116 feet wide. Madison Square's interior is 375 by 200 feet. The Arena's greatest height from floor to roof is 135 feet. The balconies and boxes will seat 14,300 persons, and 6500 more can be seated on the floor level, for such occasions as a national political convention, making a capacity of 21,000.

Three hundred flood lights are part of the lighting system, which has a current capacity equaling the demands of a city of 20,000 inhabitants. The domed roof is upheld by 20 cantilever steel trusses. With the auxiliary barna planned to accommodate 1800 head of cattle and numerous mechanical exhibits, the building investment is nearly $2,000,000.

Some of those presented to the dinner audience were S. H. Anderson, secretary of the dairy show; W. W. Marsh of Waterloo, Ia.; W. H. Ferguson of Lincoln, Neb.; J. A. Walker of Chicago; Elmer L. Music of the National Horse Show; C.

We are offering several floor samples and demonstrators at big reductions from original price. Here's an opportunity to get an automatic refrigerator at a substantial savings.

INVESTIGATION PROVES GAS REFRIGERATION SAFE

The Governmental agencies have given assurance of the general safety of present day household refrigerating methods.

"Newspaper headlines and statements to the effect," the report stated, "that the fatalities in Chicago were caused by 'gas refrigeration' without doubt had reference only to the fact that the refrigerators were gas-cooled, and that it was in no way involved."

The trouble was attributed not to individual units but to other forms of mechanical refrigeration. The Electrolux Gas Refrigerator as sold by The Laclede Gas Light Company is a single unit refrigerator.

screen stars keep their skin
lovely with Lux Toilet Soap

A GIRL with really lovely skin finds that people are attracted to her wherever she goes.

Hollywood's experience has been that to win hearts, on the screen or off, a girl must have beautifully smooth skin.

"People love the beauty of smooth skin," says George Fitzmaurice, director for First National—and sums up the experience of 39 foremost directors.

"A smooth skin is a supreme necessity to a screen star," he continues. "The public adores it—her director demands it. Every star I know has rarely lovely skin."

According to Dorothy Mackaill, "So much of a star's charm depends on soft, smooth skin!"

Small wonder, then, that 9 out of 10 beautiful screen stars are using Lux Toilet Soap. They find that it keeps the skin petal-smooth.

 FLEXIBLE SECTION

the proposed compensatory duty on shoes.

A shoe tariff, he said, would mean an increase of "many million dollars" in prices to consumers.

The text of the telegram follows:

"Cannot see distinction between need of tariff on men's and women's shoes. Women's manufacturers are more interested because of large importations from Czechoslovakia. There is nothing to prevent foreign manufacturers from eventually exporting men's shoes.

"Any justification for a tariff on shoes is nullified by a tariff on hides, thus raising shoe prices in this country many million dollars.
 In fact, I can see situation develop with duty on hides that might raise our prices sufficiently to still allow importation of cheap Czechoslovakian shoes.

"St. Louis manufacturers, 16 in number, have agreed it is better to have free shoes than to accept a duty on hides, and these manufacturers make many more women's shoes than men's. Our own production of eight and one-half million pairs of women's and misses' shoes compares with four million pairs of men's and boys' shoes annually.

"Trust you will do everything possible to maintain hides on free

last, even though we have to sacrifice duty on finished product.
 Protection does not always mean prosperity for an industry.

With the Bush telegram, Hawes put in the record another of similar tenor from 21 companies that manufacture women's shoes exclusively.

"A duty on hides," said this telegram, "will raise the price of shoes in this country and cause everyone to pay more for shoes without giving the grower of cattle any benefit."

SHEARER'S GENEVA REPORTS SHOW HE SCENTED PLOTS

last night compiled from enclosed article, "A Merchant Marine." Sent out: Imperialistic for Peace, 25 copies.

"Facing Geneva," 250 copies.

"A Merchant Marine," 250 copies.

"Sincerely, W. B. SHEARER."

This letter was stamped "received June 13, general manager Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co."

The article "A Merchant Marine" closed on this note:

"The United States has arrived at the naval cross-roads—ships and gun platforms at Geneva, or an un-American compromise that is treasonable to our inheritance."

Suspects England's Motives.

One of the reports was entitled just "Memorandum" and stated among other things the following:

"Great Britain's plan is to regulate world navies, which would guarantee and secure for her commercial and naval supremacy."

Advantages are pleaded off under the sentimental cloak of starvation.

In short, other nations are asked to sacrifice and risk even their independence to guarantee the imperialistic policies of the British empire."

A "confidential letter" which was accompanied by a "confidential report," which was stamped "received at the office of the general manager of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. on Sept. 2, 1927, was one of the most amazing."

"The Inside Story."

The letter began with the question "Was the Geneva Conference a failure?" and continued as follows:

"The enclosed is the inside story of the dangerous phases of the conference. It was necessary at times to take issue and a forceful stand to defeat and offset pressure brought to bear on certain civilian and naval members of the delegation."

"There are but four copies of the enclosed. If advisable, the story can be given wide publicity and circulation."

"If the occasion should arise for the advisability of using this story, my suggestion is to print at least 2000 copies in pamphlet form and distribute to Congress, the press, patriotic organizations and prominent men. This could be done under my name and sent out after my return. In the meantime, the story could be edited and printed."

"There is no doubt but that the British and Japanese, aided by their sympathizers including pacifists, internationalists and small navy men, will make a drive this session of Congress. High Japanese officials have been, and are in, communication with the British in London. Members of the Japanese delegation have postponed their departure to carry on further parleys. It has been suggested a move will be made to open up diplomatic negotiations with Washington in an attempt to defeat a strong naval policy, which will be the recommendations of the naval experts, including gun elevation, reconditioning our many destroyers and increased personnel."

The World Against the U. S.

"There is a strong undercurrent of anti-American feeling spreading over continental Europe. England does not take defeat easily. They resent the exposure at Geneva and no doubt 'perfidious Albion' will shine in all her glory, even to a united Europe against the United States. Japan is closely allied to Great Britain in her Far East policy."

"This is the first time that the American press and people have supported an adequate navy, and merchant marine program. This asset cannot be ignored until we are over the top. It was a fight at Geneva—not a tea-party, regardless of any statements to the contrary. The issue is: will America become a first-class maritime Power, or be defeated by the crocodile tears of sentimentality? I will remain in Geneva until Sept. 1, sailing for America about Oct. 1. By that time, I will have further information of the British line-up."

"Aug. 16, 1927."

The article called "Facing Geneva" read in part as follows:

"The preparatory commission for disarmament reached a unanimous agreement to take a recess until Nov. 1, 1927. Military and naval experts guided by political issues drifted back with the tide of reality to the starting point. At Geneva, April 26, 1927, in the halls of the League of Nations, the chairman of the preparatory disarmament conference made a masterly appeal for a better understanding among nations, then rang down the curtain on a great attempt, realizing and acknowledging the utter failure to reach an understanding."

"Every effort, suggestion and proposal was blocked with reservations. The total count shows Britain's reservations were double those of any other nation."

Fleets Compared.

"Take up in order the so-called proposals. Examine the results should Great Britain attain her end."

"The much heralded friendship between Great Britain and the United States is based on 100 years of peace, primarily established by our metal and valor."

"If America is to have a just peace, freedom of the seas, and the protection of its coastwise trade, then foreign naval bases flanking our coast or in our seas must go, unless which a treaty ratio and a limitation of naval armament is an illusion and a weak foundation for everlasting friendship or peace."

NEW YORK CHEERS MAYOR OF BERLIN

Gustav Boess Received by Walker at City Hall—Presented With Scroll.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Repaying a visit Major James J. Walker made to Berlin on his European tour in 1927, Mayor Gustav Boess of the German capital today formally arrived in New York and was received at City Hall.

Coming in yesterday on the liner Berlin Mayor Boess missed the customary uproarious welcome given distinguished guests but today's ceremonies were in the traditional manner.

Several thousand persons thronged City Hall Plaza to cheer the German Mayor.

Pelice Commissioner Grover A. Whelan, acting as official greeter, met Mayor Boess and escorted him to the Aldermanic chambers where Mayor Walker was waiting.

"The City of New York," Mayor Walker said, "has a seaward gate which always swings wide with hospitable intent to salute the entrance of its distinguished friends from across the broad Atlantic. As chief executive of this city's millions of people, I most heartily welcome you."

He then presented Mayor Boess with a scroll as a memorial of his visit.

"The ladies and gentlemen of my party and myself thank you most heartily for the extremely friendly words you have spoken to us."

"As a visible sign of the friendly relations connecting New York and Berlin I am presenting to you this flag of our own city and I hope that this flag will find a place in your City Hall and will be a perpetual token of our good will."

Mayor Boess and his party, which includes four of his city officials, expect to spend a month in America, studying municipal projects and reforms of New York and other cities as far west as the Pacific coast.

Among the cities they will visit are Washington, St. Louis, Detroit, Chicago, Denver, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Philadelphia.

DRUG CLERK GETS JAIL TERM UNDER DRY LAW

Federal Judge Also Fines Him $450 on Plea of Guilty.

Francis C. Riley, a drug store clerk who sold two pints of whisky to prohibition agents, pleaded guilty on two charges of illegal sale of intoxicating liquors in Federal Court today and was sentenced to three months in jail and fined $450.

Riley, a clerk in the drug store of Henry P. Schlegelhaus, 2193 South Grand boulevard, asserted through his attorney, that he was but an employee acting upon his superior's instructions in selling the whisky, and without participation in the profits.

Judge Davis replied: "2193 South Grand is a nice neighborhood, as good as any in the city. I see no reason why a druggist in that vicinity should sink to selling whisky to make his business profitable."

Of 18 defendants in prohibition

Federal Judge Davis, in response to a plea for leniency for the clerk, said: "I will show him the same consideration that I would a Levee bartender."

Of 18 defendants in prohibition

cases to plead guilty before Judge Davis today, Riley was the only one to receive a jail sentence.

Negro's Fine Stayed.

Among those who pleaded guilty of illegal possession was William Owens, Negro, 1323 Morgan street, who, unable to give bond, has been in jail since July 29. Judge Davis expressed the opinion that Owens had "suffered sufficiently," fined him $50, and stayed the fine.

Others who pleaded guilty of possession and their fines: S. J. Jobe, $500 Jennings roads, $450; Dominick Laura, $115 North Broadway, $450; Joe Ligibel, 613 Walnut street, (two counts), $500; William L. More buyers choose Frigidaire than all other electric refrigerators combined

All mechanical parts are inside the cabinet, and the "Cold Control" freezes desserts better and makes ice quicker

The Frigidaire "Cold Control" has introduced a new standard in electric refrigeration. It is as important as a gas regulator on an oven.

LOOK at a Frigidaire and you'll understand why it is the world's most popular electric refrigerator.

Here is a cabinet of striking beauty with all mechanical parts completely enclosed... out of sight and out of the way. Here is a refrigerator with a surplus of power... power that keeps the temperature of the food compartment down where you want it... always.

Here too, is incredible quietness of operation. You don't hear the new Frigidaire start, stop, or run.

Then, to double the greater service that Frigidaire has always offered, every household model is now equipped with the "Cold Control"... a device that speeds the freezing of ice cubes and provides positive freezing temperatures for unusual desserts that require extreme cold.

The Frigidaire "Cold Control" gives you your choice of any one of six different freezing speeds... at will. It's a feature you'll want when you buy an automatic refrigerator. And you can get it only on Frigidaire.

LEGGE DEFENDS WORK OF FEDERAL FARM BOARD

the physical property," Legge observed. "And they cannot buy or lease storage facilities that do not exist."

Senator Wheeler (Dem.) read to the committee a letter which he said was from a "good Republican" who stated that Montana wheat growers were hauling their No. 1 wheat to Canada to get the higher Canadian price.

Wheeler gave illustration.

"This farmer," said Wheeler, "writes that with wheat 30 cents to 47 cents higher in Canada, Montana farmers are trucking their wheat into Canada, paying the 12 cents a bushel duty, and even then getting 15 cents more a bushel than they could get in Montana."

To this Legge replied that the board had sent four representatives in the Northwest and Canada to discover why Canadian prices were higher.

"The lower Canadian freight rates are responsible for 7 or 8 cents of the differential," he said, "but that does not account for all the difference."

"You must remember that Canada has ample storage facilities, which we lack, and grain operators tell me—and I am not saying this in my own opinion—that the American speculators have changed their operations to Winnipeg. But the Canadian price is only 2 cents higher than the world price at Liverpool, and it costs 13 cents a bushel to export the wheat."

"It must be that the Canadians are holding their grain for a higher world price, because they could not sell it now in the world market, as a comparison of the Winnipeg and Liverpool prices will show."

No Immediate Relief.

When Senator Frazier of North Dakota declared that the farmers of the Northwest were being fleeced worse than they had ever been fleeced in 25 years, Norbeck of South Dakota sarcastically observed that the opponents of the McNary-Haugen bill had argued that it would raise the price of bread to the city worker.

"The present law," he said, "has only succeeded in making reducing the price the American farmer gets for his wheat."

Legge admitted that the American wheat growers were getting less than the Canadian, but the only solution he could offer was the distant hope of more storage facilities. He stated that if the wheat and grain co-operatives took advantage of the present law, storage facilities could be erected within two or three years.

He stated that as yet none of the wheat co-operatives had applied for elevator loans. Wheeler insisted that the Government itself should provide these facilities, but Legge stated that his reading of the law did not convince him that the Farm Board had that authority.

Legge and Caraway had sharp words over the interpretation of the law, Legge declaring that he had read it 20 times and still did not understand some parts of it.

"Your answers convince me of that," Caraway observed.

Attack by Cotton Group.

The cotton experts on the committee, Smith of South Carolina and Heflin of Alabama, joined with Caraway in attacking the Board's cotton policy. Heflin declared that when the price of cotton had unexpectedly gone down on publication of the Government's forecast in September showing a decline of 700,000 bales in comparison with the August estimates, the Board should have advised the cotton growers not to sell their cotton.

Legge replied that the board was specifically prohibited from making crop forecasts.

"I know that," Heflin said, "but you should have advised the cotton growers that there was no reason for the price to go down and that they should hold their crop."

"If we had done that, and the price had continued to go lower," Legge said, "I think we could have been held responsible for any losses the growers might have sustained by following our advice."

To Bring in Harvester Leagues.

Smith attacked the board's policy of making only supplemental loans to the cotton growers, and Legge countered by saying that when the board became better organized and could make its own investigations, primary loans would be considered. He admitted that at present, the only service the board offered cotton growers was slightly larger amounts at a lower rate of interest than they could get from other agencies.

At the request of Smith Chairman McNary directed Legge to bring with him tomorrow a statement showing how much his Harvester stock was worth in 1920 and how much it is worth today. As Harvester stock has had a phenomenal rise in recent years, the object of this exhibit will be to show that certain industrial organizations have been extremely prosperous, while agriculture as an industry has suffered a depression.

TREASURY TO RECOMMEND SUBSTANTIAL CUT IN TAXES

Continued Prosperity and Large Income Returns to Be Basis for Action Expected at Regular Session of Congress.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—A substantial reduction in taxes, favored by President Hoover, will be recommended to the regular sessions of Congress next December by the Treasury to become effective next March 15, but what form the reduction will take has not been determined.

It was learned today at the Treasury that the Treasury condition in prospect for the coming year is regarded as warranting a slash in taxes, and with this in view experts will start work within a week to determine how much of a cut can be made and how it will be distributed.

The financial officials who have watched the Government revenue this year, which at the close of business Sept. 20 exceeded collections for the first two and a half months of the last fiscal year by $118,936,480, pointed to continued prosperity and large income tax collections as the basis upon which the tax reduction would be made.

Since July 1, the total Government income has amounted to $921,377,495, while the income tax collections for the year have totaled, up to Sept. 20, approximately $1,800,000,000, an increase over the same period of the previous year of approximately $271,000,000. In addition, the Treasury expects to collect approximately $500,000,000 income tax when the December payments are made. With continued prosperity experts believe that income taxes will keep on mounting and equal or not pass those of the last year. It has been the experience of the Government that each time taxes have been reduced, collections have been substantially increased through withdrawal of funds from tax-exempt securities and their investment in other lines.

While not predicting that the prospective tax cut to be proposed in December would be $300,000,000, officials said it would be large, as present indications are that the Government will end the fiscal year June 30 with a surplus of more than $200,000,000 as compared with $184,000,000 last year.

The income payments, which created a predicted Government deficit into a surplus last year, are counted on to continue high when the returns for this calendar year are received next March. Last March, the income tax receipts amounted to $901,268,804. The June payments totaled $556,526,508 and the September payments up to Sept. 20 have aggregated $491,256,627, with 10 days to be reported.

Treasury officials in proposing tax reductions formerly figured that the Government must have a margin of at least $100,000,000 between income and expenditures. This opinion has been changed in recent years, however, and officials have expressed the belief that a smaller margin is safe.

A reduction in the tax on earned incomes is regarded as likely to be one of the principal proposals of the program. The Treasury has not yet committed itself upon this phase, but Secretary Mellon in the past has said he was in sympathy with lowered rates on earned incomes.

Tax reductions since 1921 have already cut approximately $1,826,000,000 off the tax bill of the nation. These reductions were made in the revenue acts of 1921, 1922, 1923, 1924, 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930, 1931, 1932, 1933, 1934, 1935, 1936, 1937, 1938, 1939, 1940, 1941, 1942, 1943, 1944, 1945, The milk produced on American farms last year weighed 80,000,000 tons, or twice the weight all pig iron produced in the United States. Some part of this milk supply, industrial plants turned out products valued at nearly $4,000,000. Dairying is America's greatest industry."

THE WAY OF A WOMAN Paris Still Wondering About Eve Lavalliere

By Marguerite M. Marshall.

WOMEN DON'T NEED RAIN

WOMAN to woman, we ask you, has it been anything less than a practically perfect summer, from the feminine viewpoint of weather? The country undoubtedly needs rain, but women don't. The farmers and the lawn-loving commuters pray for rain—but not the female of the species. And, after all, why shouldn't barometric pressure be arranged occasionally to suit her? Last summer and the year before there was rain—gallons of it. This year the sun is shining, day after golden day, and most women hereabouts have been basking in the "clear, unobscured fair," without a sigh for a shower.

A summer of practically perpetual sunshine is so easy on women's clothes! Chiffon frocks, caught in a swift downpour, turn to wisps of wetness. Dainty, light-colored shoes never look the same again after they've been soaked. Suntan hose were never made for mud splashes. Hats of hemp or other gauzy straws melt unbekomingly about the face when rained on.

Yet women loathe rainy-day protective apparel. Even the smartest slicker is really nothing but a raincoat, and essentially unattractive. Rubbers, to the lightest of sandals, are an abomination; summer arctics are hot to wear and to look at. Umbrellas are a nuisance.

Even more annoying than safeguards against rain is their ineradicable tendency always to be where a woman doesn't want them. If she wears her slicker and carries an umbrella it clears off; if she leaves them at home it doesn't.

When rain weather is a habit it concentrates, nearly always, on week-ends. How can a girl who works all the week have any fun if it rains from Saturday to Monday?

Rainy days are pure ruin to the children's temperaments, particularly during summer. Any woman who has had to keep children amused and at peace in a summer boarding house or bungalow, during two or three days downpour, becomes a sun worshiper for the rest of her life.

On a husband, rain in summer has a most unfortunate effect. He shows that, despite his promise, he is not the man who is supposed to be. The storm that is staged during his vacation, the pervasive dampness of drizzling days, go far to wreck his naturally sweet disposition. And he has a most illogical way of taking his unpleasant weather on his wife.

Placid, feminine and metropolitan as are these reflections on rain and raininess, we'll wager they express the point of view of many a woman, who has loved the golden-summer of 1935. At one beach there is no greenery to begettered and the colors on the desert sea (without any water shortage) and cloudless sky never have been more lovely. The sky isn't really cloudless, it simply wears rose and gold and fleecy white instead of somber gray and blue-black. Sunset and sunrise paint the horizon with great strokes of flaming pink and daffodil yellow. The sand is white and warm, the salt-tasting breeze breathes coolness into the sun-washed air. We can stand hours and hours with more equanimity than many, because we're not so fussy about our clothes, we never get wet when we get wet, and dampness gives us neither rheumatism nor blue devils. Nevertheless, "set fair" summer certainly suits us, and it makes girls and women bloom—even if potatoes and berries wither.

Matched Bag and Shoes

REMARKS of the increasing fashion value of matching bags and shoes have not been unfounded. For this season they are more artfully attached in media and color than ever. Another season of colored accessories draws near. For example, should the bag and shoes be in a shade of mahogany, green, sage blue, or a deep brown, the costume may afford the neutral complement as a background by being beige or brown.

A very smart bag-shoe ensemble now exciting the interest of autumn shoppers is one of suede in which the round sunken handle motif of the bag is repeated in the side decoration of the oxford type of shoe. Other leathers to diversify such an accessory duo include lizard, kid, the reptiles and patent leather. And the colors include black, brown, blue, green, garnet and a purple termed panther.

This ensemble idea has affected evening accessories to such an extent that the seed pearl bag now is matched to a slipper having a vamp decorated with pearls.

Canned String Beans. So much more delicious when done at home than the bought variety. String the beans and break into uniform lengths. Blanch for 10 minutes so the pod will hold without breaking. Dip into cold water, drain and pack in hot jars. Add salt and cover with boiling water. Seal loosely and sterilize in boiling water for 3 hours. Remove and tighten covers. If the beans are freshly picked, this method of canning will deceive anyone into thinking they are fresh beans.

THE strange riddle of Eve Lavalliere's life may never be solved. The once famous comedy star of the French stage, who 13 years ago suddenly left Paris to change wealth and adoration for the ascetic solitude of a Franciscan nunnery, died recently in Thullieres, a village of Lorraine, in a lonely valley of the Vosges Mountains. She left no message, been waiting 13 years for a word of explanation. She expressed no regret for the memories of her gay and brilliant career on the stage. She died with a contented smile on her lips, disclosing no secret of her transformation from the gayest actress of Paris into the humblest lay sister of an obscure convent. And Paris, intrigued by the strange story of this modern Thais, can begin anew the endless speculations as to the conversion of Eve Lavalliere.

AMERICANS who visited Paris shortly before the outbreak of the World War will remember Eve Lavalliere of the Varieties, who numbered among her admirers Kings and Princes, artists, writers and statesmen. In 1914 she was at the height of her career. The celebrated playwrights wrote comedies for her, her salon was the rendezvous of France's literary and theatrical beau monde, she was the glass of fashion and the mold of fascinating femininity. Nobody knew exactly how old she was, but she must have been well over 50 when in the spring of 1914 a young newspaperman married himself at the door of her dressing room, victim of a hopeless infatuation for the "divine Eve," that latter-day Ninon de l'Enclos who at 51 looked like a 20-year-old girl.

Whatever the popular actress' real age, it is the fact that Eve Lavalliere was a juvenile when she first came to Paris. Her name was Eugenie Fenoglio, and she had grown up in the Italian quarter of Toulon with her parents, until a double tragedy drove her away from the city of her birth. Her father, a poor working man, killed her mother in a quarrel and then committed suicide. For a time young Eve worked in a factory to save enough money to go to Paris.

Arrived in the capital, she tried first to make a living by selling flowers in the street. Then she applied for a job as a chorus girl at the Bouffes Parisiennes. The manager engaged her rather out of pity than because he saw in her a future star, at 100 francs a month—the equivalent of $5 a week. A few months later she advanced to a similar position at the Theatre Varieties where she earned 150 francs a week and got a chance to learn roles such as even a chorus girl could play. One of her first speaking parts was in a new comedy by Alfred Capus. She had only a few lines but these she spoke in such a taking way that the author decided to rewrite the role and make a principal character of it.

ON THE first night Eve Lavalliere scored a success almost unprecedented even in the annals of the Varieties. The public applauded her madly; she got more curtain calls than the leading lady. The next morning M. Serge Basset, critic for Pigaro, wrote that the success of the play was due to Mlle. Lavalliere.

The former chorus girl became overnight a star among stars. Her way of wearing her hair became a fashion, anticipating the present "boyish bob." As the personator of the Paris "gamin," the young boy of the streets, she became the idol of the Parisian public. Everything an ambitious young woman could desire lay at her feet—wealth, fame, the adoration of the world's most brilliant capital. She counted among her admirers such royal personages as the late King Edward of England and ex-King Manuel of Portugal.

A few years later she married M. Samuel, the manager of the Theatre des Varieties. They lived during the winter in a luxurious mansion in Paris and spent the summer in a castle in Provence filled with costly antique furniture. Every season she appeared in a new play and each creation meant a new triumph for her. The brightest of French comedy writers cut tomatoes in halves—as many as you wish to bake. Arrange on a greased pie plate. Sprinkle each tomato with minced onion, salt and pepper. Dot with butter and sprinkle with sugar. Bake in a hot oven (450° F.) about 15 minutes, until brown on top.

Notice the "sprinkle with sugar." It has been rediscovered that a dash of sugar is the secret of delicious vegetable cookery. This old secret was lost until four cooking experts rediscovered it recently. Cook vegetables in little water and add a dash of sugar while they are cooking. It does not make the vegetables taste sweet. But it makes them taste better than any vegetable foods you probably have ever tasted. A dash of sugar develops and builds up the delicate enjoyable vegetable flavors. The results will surprise you.

See that the children and adults in your family eat enough milk, vegetables and fruits. These are rated by scientists as the three basic foods. Use a little sugar to make delicious milk shakes, and milk drinks such as milk shake and egg-nog. Sprinkle sugar on corn flakes. Use sugar in stewed fruits. Convince yourself now of the wonders of sugar in cooking vegetables.

Hundreds of thousands of children—many doubtless in prosperous families—are suffering from under-nourishment. Use sugar to flavor to promote enjoyable, healthful eating. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.

The transformation—from irrepressible "gamin" of the Varieties to lonely cloistered nun.

Why Did the Gayest and Most Feted Actress of Paris Suddenly Take to Nunnery, Never to Return?

By Henri Dori.

They were glad when Lavalliere consented to appear in their plays. At one time she thought of coming to America for a few months with her own ensemble, even as Bernhardt and Rejane had done. Then suddenly and unexpectedly, she vanished from Paris and notified her manager that she would never again appear on the stage.

WHEN the Paris newspapers first published the announcement of Mlle. Lavalliere's decision to become a nun there was no man or woman in France who believed that she really meant to quit the stage. Everybody thought the whole business was simply a press agent's trick and confidently expected to see Lavalliere in a new play before the end of the season. The season, however, ended without any sign of the reappearance of the popular star. Contradictory rumors reached Paris about the alleged affairs and doings of Mlle. Lavalliere in the provinces. Some conjectured that the death of her husband had caused her to cut short her stage career. Others thought she had become involved in a love affair and preferred the quiet of the provinces to the spotlight glare of life in Paris. Still others contended that she did not want to appear in frivolous comedies while the war was raging. Nobody knew anything positive, yet it was still generally agreed that the new season would open with the spectacular return of Mlle. Lavalliere from her voluntary exile. Instead of returning to Paris, however, Eve Lavalliere started her friends with a final renunciation. She gave all her possessions to the Franciscan Order, took monastic vows and went to Africa in a sister to work in a hospital.

SOME of the mystery of Eve Lavalliere's decision to become a nun tried to reach her in the cloister of Bethany in Tunis, but she refused to see any one. Envoys of the theatrical world in Paris made overtures but they were turned away at the gate of the nunnery. Sister Eve, they were told, did not wish to see any of her friends who could remind her of the past. All this seemed incomprehensible. Why should the "Divine Eve" in a cloister, surrounded from all that was dear to her, risking her health, even her life, under the scorching African sun? Even if she desired to spend the remainder of her life in retirement, why in a cloister over some woman, should she sever all connection with the worldly life in which she had reigned as a queen for so many years? Why? There must be some valid reason, Paris thought, some secret motive which would account for this revision in the life of Eve Lavalliere. Whereupon speculations as to the secret motive began. She was forced into retirement, some hinted, by the military authorities, who suspected her of being a German spy. She had been intimate with a German diplomat before the war. This charge was quickly disproved by the military officials themselves. Then a new rumor sprang up, about six young aviators having formed a "Lavalliere Squad," and all six were supposed to have died. Again the fable was disproved by the authorities. There never was a "Lavalliere Squad" among the French aviators. There were several young war aviators who knew the actress and two of them were killed in action, but they were merely casual acquaintances of the theatrical star.

Then, persisted gossip, it must have been the tragedy of Harry Fragon, a well remembered vaudeville star. His father killed him in a quarrel over some woman, and then committed suicide. Fragon was a friend of Lava here, so it was said, and so she must have been the woman in question and thus the cause of the tragedy. Once more the hypothesis fell down. There never had been a love affair between the unfortunate Fragon and Mlle. Lavalliere. Moreover, all this happened before the war, and Lavalliere had, subsequently appeared in two new plays with great success. The solution must lie somewhere else.

BUT the solution, if there was one, could never be found, despite the interest that Paris always maintained regarding the mystery of Eve Lavalliere. As time went on many people tried to get an interview with Sister Eve, who eventually returned to France and went to live in the cloister of Thullieres in the Vosges Mountains. But Sister Eve refused herself to all callers. She had nothing to say. She did not answer letters. She never read the newspapers and did not wish to hear about theatrical or other events in Paris. She was dead to the world. The actress Eve Lavalliere had died years ago, and the woman who lived on as Sister Eve had no concern with the distracting vanity fair called Paris.

One man finally did succeed in getting an interview with Sister Eve. Robert de Fiers, the dramatist, friend of her better days in Paris, talked with her through the bars of her convent cell, where she sat in a chair, a sick, old woman, but still with the smile of contentment on her lips.

"My friends," she said, "why do people seek to lift the veil of my life? Would they torture me with memories of the past? The ways of men are strange. They envied me while I lived among

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 24. The latest manifestation of change wrought in celluloid entertainment by the talkies is seen in the many leading men who are turning villains and character actors. Morris affords a good example. A young stage leader, hero of a production of a good film here and instead made out of his hits in unsympathetic roles in two great films, "Alibi" and "Fast Life."

Jason Roberts, who was a stage leading man in a stock company with Morris as his understudy, first "dickied" in the talkies. He played a hero role in a recent picture, "The Tale of Lost Ships," and presto! he was given a part in Irene Bordoni's screen production of "Paris" that called for much greater acting ability than the average hero role requires.

Then there is that strikingly handsome young Mexican, Ernesto Giffan, who when discovered three years ago by First National and Vitaphone producers, was hailed as a second Valentino, and re-named Donald Reed. Reed was given two of the most important leading roles a young man could play, one opposite Colleen Moore, first in national popularity rankings at the time, and the other opposite Billie Dove, at that time sixth ranking star.

Today he slowly and steadily is building a new reputation, after disappearing as a leading man. Now a villain, he holds a unique position as the youngest and handsomest antagonist in pictures. He recently played Baptiste in "Evangeline," a gleam in "Little Johnny Jones," and a ponderous and Spanish "heavies" in Alice White's "Show Girl" and Leatrice Joy's "A Modern Immortal Lady."

Sidney Blackmer, like Chester Morris, began his film career in a supporting role in "The Moon Flower," and in many ways as star. Blackmer has just finished the main role with Leatrice Joy in "The Most Immortal Lady," and is supporting Dorothy Mackall in "The Love Racket."

Even the regular film stars are exempt from this change. George Bancroft in "Thunderbolt" offers an excellent example; he is the villain of the piece. Jack Gilford has unsympathetic roles in such pictures as "Redemption," although he attempts to regain sympathy near the end, and various other stars' films are offered as counterexamples.

Raymond Hackett has just finished an unsympathetic role opposite Colleen Moore in "Footlights and Fools." Edmund Lowe, hero of many a film, was matinee idol in "The Sign of the Cross," and within a week he began his career as villain in "Old Arizona." He is now playing in Milla Dore's latest, "The Painted Angel."

Edmund Burns, hero of many a film, was recently cast in the role of a villain in "Hard to Get," and he will shortly be doing the wicked deeds in "The Dark Swan" for First National. More than ever, since the sterner requirements brought to the film by the talkies, good villains are in demand. Handsome villains are the rule, too. The villain is no longer immediately branded by his sinister appearance, as he was once by black mustaches and a tall silk hat.

These factors, the directors declare, have brought the best actors and leading men into the villain's ranks, and have even injected a few villain roles into the average male star's cinematic repertoire.

GEORGE

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 24.—The latest manifestation of George Bancroft's talent in the many leading men who are appearing in the picture "The Last Days of Pompeii" is a good example. A young stage leader, Bancroft, who came to Hollywood to be a film hero and instead made a reputation for himself as a good actor, is playing the part of a young man who is a friend of the hero. tongue well within teeth to prevent removal by jogging motion. "Now you must post. Posting is a purely defensive move. It will come natural enough after you have trotted for a few minutes. You simply transfer part of the wear and tear to your feet by standing in the stirrups. "On leaving the horse, try to hold the body limp. This avoids broken bones; only a few bruises are likely to result."

GOOD hipsters, stutters, stammers, talkers-through-the-nose are in demand in Hollywood. Of course, you have to be a good actor and have other qualifications to "make the grade" into the talkies. But the hip and so on are able to prove as valuable as Ben Turpin's optical defect proved to him years ago, in the silent cinema's early days.

Realism in screen conversation is all the rage in Hollywood now, and since it was permanent in the silent technique, it will probably be permanent in the noisy celluloid. Realism demands all sorts of voices: good ones and bad ones, hair-lip voices and flannel-mouthed Irish voices and the Stepin Fetchit brand, which is super-Black-Crow.

At First National Studios in Burbank, California, last week, the call sheets for various companies demanded the following vocal deficiencies:

Stuttering man.
1 Stammering woman.
1 Hair-lipped man.
1 Handsome young man with a cold in his nose!
1 Lining Negro girl, twelve years old.

The last item has to do with Marion "Peanuts" Byron, kiddie comedienne who is now in pictures. She lisp the name of her lover, "Big Boy" Guinn Williams, in a football picture called "The Forward Pass." The big fellow's name is "The Little" Negro girl is used to mimic her.

FACES changed while you wait! There is a magic room in the Paramount studios, one door through which people have changed in race or nationality, altered in features or aged a decade.

In this room presides a man who with grease paints, powders, pencils, brushes and "wig" transforms all who come his way. He is Jim Collins, head of the makeup department of the Hollywood film plant.

Before beginning a new picture, the actors consult him as carefully as they do the wardrobe mistress, for he sets their faces to their roles.

"A face is an easel upon which the makeup man paints the character he wishes to represent," Collins says.

"A makeup man is born, not made. At a glance, he must be able to look at a face and tell what kind of moustache or beard would suit it naturally. He must know the different hair-dresses, beards and facial characteristics of the various periods of history and of the races and nationalities.

"Not only is it his business to create characters of different moods and expressions, but he must be able to make faces beautiful by erasing that which is not conducive to comeliness. Any defect that the camera may pick up must be removed. A chin becomes double with a little shading, and noses are changed by it. Perfect faces may be changed with putty or wax or immobile muscles.

"Men take but one-third the time to make up that women do, for women are more painstaking than men with their lips and eyes. Where we count on spending 15 minutes applying a 'straight' makeup on a man, we allow 45 minutes for a woman.

"Most of the tedious, intricate makeups, however, fall to the man, often trying their patience. It took two and a half hours to give Richard Arlen an unshaven face in 'The Four Feathers,' as each hair was put on separately with putty. It takes two hours in 'Behind the Makeup' to put on Hal Skelly's cosmetic, which is carefully outlined and then painted on."

SHRIEKS reaching high C and emotional fireworks threatened for a few minutes to stop the filming of one of the scenes in Paramount's "The Children."

A change in dressing rooms was suggested to the player. A raise of salary was mentioned. Even an afternoon at the beach was offered. All promises were made to dear ears. Finally the player's mother brought him his bottle of milk. A peaceful calm settled over the set with a startling suddenness, for Donald Smith is only nine months old, and when he wants his bottle, he forgets all about production schedules. Otherwise he is a very good baby.

Tomato Chutney.

Peel and cut 12 large tomatoes, chop 6 onions finely and add 1 cup vinegar, 2 cups sugar, 1 cup ground raisins, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon red pepper, ½ teaspoon white pepper. Boil slowly for 1½ hours. Put in sterilized jars and seal while hot. A delightful relish for next winter.

THE MAKE-BELIEVE WIFE--By Kathleen Norris

A Romance of Modern Life

"And what you felt was fooling, was that it?"
"No. Oh, no!"

CHAPTER 34.

"I've always told you," Beatrice went on, "that I didn't need you—that I wouldn't take your friendship, Bert. But tonight—tonight it's different. To-night I found out—when Hugh failed me—her voice broke, and she was still."

"Tonight I found out something. 'That you don't really care for me, that you don't want to help me,' Beatrice said angrily and childishly, as he paused.

"No, not that. But that—I isn't a thing to fool with, and I've been fooling," Bert answered, feeling for words as he thought it out.

"And what you felt for me was fooling—was that it?"
"No. Oh, no!"
"You found out that you didn't really care," she said proudly. "You found out that you didn't love me!"

"No," he answered, puzzled and fumbling, and always with his hands on her shoulders and his eyes smiling down at her. "No, I think that I found out that I did."

"Did! And yet now you won't even be friends with me. What's happened to you?"
There was a pause. Then he said simply, "I think perhaps, I've grown up. It came to me to-night that I loved you, and that this is the only way out, for me. I love him, too. It's all perfectly clear now," Bert said, in an undertone, half to himself.

"Not to me!" she said, impatient, gloomy, irritable. "In that room there—that room in the Lambert house—" Bert added. "Something seemed to split—clear—inside my head. And I saw him—Dad—well, I don't know!" He laughed gruffly; there was a little break in his voice. "I grew up," he finished, with an eloquent smile and shrug. "God knows I've been long enough about it!"

"And I grew up too, in that same room," Beatrice began warmly. "I knew, all of a sudden, that I'd been asleep, all this year—playing at marriage, playing at being in love with Hugh, loving myself because the tradespeople and the servants and the firm were so nice to me—poor fool that I am! And I can't go back, Bert," she went on excitedly.

"His jealousy—his stupid, wicked, horrible jealousy—has spoiled everything!" Beatrice exclaimed. "He can't take it differently in the morning," Bert told her. And as she made no answer, but continued to stare into space, with a bitter lip he added, "I must go now. Dad may be home at any minute, and I mustn't be here."

"Do I see you tomorrow?" she asked, rousing from a reverie. "I don't know. I suppose so. Goodby, Bert," he said simply. "Goodby, Bert," she looked at him wistfully. "I suppose we'll see why all this had to happen some day," she said, forlornly.

"But that's just it!"—he began protesting. "Just what?"
"Well—nothing has happened," Bert offered lamely. Beatrice's eyes flashed again. "I think something has happened!" she said hotly.

"Ah, no, Bert. Dad's made you angry. But—married people have to forgive each other," Bert suggested uncertainly. "I think," she said, coming back to him, "that it will be better if I go away for awhile. There is something about that woman—" really think that, Bert," she interrupted herself to ask, beginning to cry, "what earthly peace or comfort is there ever going to be in this world for him or for me? Why didn't he ask me quietly? Why didn't he wait?"

"I don't suppose, when a person gets jealous, he can exactly control what he does, Bert," she suggested, anxiously pleading. "But there seems to be no use trying to please a jealous person, Bert," she said, sobbing. "For if there isn't any real reason for trouble he'll—he'll invent it!"

"He didn't invent that! I care a terrible lot for you," the boy said humbly in a low tone. Beatrice threw up her head. Her bright, impatient eyes did not falter in their steady look at him.

"Well, what of it, Bert? He didn't want you to hate me, I suppose," she demanded. "You found out that you didn't love me!"

"No. But that's what has driven him sort of cuckoo," he suggested ineffectually. Beatrice reflected on this, looking away, sniffing, wiping her eyes.

"I'm going away tomorrow for a while," she said. "To your mother?"
"No!" Her eyes returned to him indignantly. "Why should I be sent to my mother, as if I'd done something wrong? She to report, I suppose, in weekly letters, that I've been every night at 10 o'clock and that I was apparently repentant!"

"Beatrice," Bert interrupted, "that doesn't sound like you! We've all been wrong, in this mess—to clear—inside my head. And I saw him—Dad—well, I don't know!" He laughed gruffly; there was a little break in his voice. "I grew up," he finished, with an eloquent smile and shrug. "God knows I've been long enough about it!"

"And I grew up too, in that same room," Beatrice began warmly. "I knew, all of a sudden, that I'd been asleep, all this year—playing at marriage, playing at being in love with Hugh, loving myself because the tradespeople and the servants and the firm were so nice to me—poor fool that I am! And I can't go back, Bert," she went on excitedly.

WALL STREET
BAD BREAK IN STOCK LIST, THEN RALLY

Extreme Declines in Many High-Priced Issues Ran From 5 to 20 Points Before Recovery.

MANY EXPLANATIONS FOR THE SETBACK

Loans Are Called and Call Rate Advances to 10 Per Cent—Fear English Bank Rate Rise.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—A bad break in the stock market today was followed by a brisk recovery, which left final quotations generally lower but well above the day's low levels. Extreme declines in many of the high priced issues ran from 5 to 20 points but most of these were substantially reduced and a few wiped out altogether and converted into small gains. Trading was fairly heavy in volume, with the ticker 20 minutes behind the market at the height of the selling movement. Total sales ran close to 5,000,000 shares.

Scattered calling of loans, totaling between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000 in the aggregate placed considerable strain on the demand money market. It was reflected in an advance in the rate for fresh accommodation to 10 per cent from the renewal figure of 8 per cent. The higher rate was effective in bringing in a small volume of fresh funds, but as the afternoon wore along money brokers reported the situation increasingly firm at that level. Time money for little longer than three months maturity still commanded 9 1/2 per cent on the bid.

Bank Losses More Gold.
Withdrawal of another $1,000,000 gold from the Bank of England, the bulk of it for Paris, with a portion slated to come to New York, was viewed by some in London, according to cabled advice, as likely to bring action on the bank rate there, at tomorrow's meeting. Today's withdrawals bring the total of gold lost by the bank this week to around $12,000,000, the heaviest in some weeks, and sufficient, perhaps, to bring a substantial reduction in Federal Reserve brokers' loans tomorrow although the calling for payment of a large investment trust issue may upset some of the earlier estimates.

No Want of Explanations.
While Wall Street found several pages on which to hang the decline, such as the tight credit situation, the recession in steel mill activity and predictions of a higher London bank rate, many experienced observers held to the opinion that the decline represented a belated correction of a top-heavy speculative position. While most margin accounts were in strong condition at the peak of the advance about three weeks ago, the recent decline which has carried several of the leading stocks down 25 to 75 points below the year's high levels, has impaired these accounts, and has resulted in some forced liquidations.

The Iron Age review pointed out that "evidences of price weakness have accumulated as steel production has declined but again emphasizes the strong railroad demand."

Some Wide Ranges.
U. S. Steel common which dipped more than 5 points to 22 1/2, snapped back to 23 1/4, where it was off fractionally. Westinghouse Electric broke 11 points and rallied 8 1/2. American & Foreign Power dropped 11 and recovered all but 4 1/2 points of its loss. Simmons converted a loss of 14 points into a gain of 3. Raytheon closed 3 1/2 points lower at $9 1/2, having dipped close to $5. General Motors regained all but 1 point of its early decline of 13. Similar recoveries took place in Columbia Carbon was run up.
